Libya air base hit by Egypt bomb

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Egypt Friday bombed and destroyed Libya's Gamal Abdel Nasser air base, the former Tobruk air base, in the second day of warfare between the two North African neighbors.

Libya charged Egyptian paratroops and armored columns also invaded behind the bombing raids.

The attack occurred even as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat warned Libyan strongman Col. Moammar Khadafy, "We will hit you."

An Egyptian spokesman said the base, situated about 80 miles west of the Libyan-Egyptian border, "its installations and some warplanes stationed there, were destroyed."

"All our planes returned safely," he said.

THE SPOKESMAN said the Egyptian attack was in retaliation for three air raids launched by Libyan warplanes against the Egyptian border town of Salum on the Mediterranean coast earlier Friday, in which three Egyptian soldiers were injured.

The Libyan raiders had come from Gamal Abdel Nasser base, which the Egyptians call Al Adem base.

"Since the Libyan regime was continuing its aggressions, particularly by using its air force, in a manner which threatened the security of our forces and our soil, our air force attacked the Al Adem air base, from which Libyan warplanes had launched their raids aainst us," the spokesman said.

It was the second day of heavy fighting between Egypt and Libya, who only four years ago planned to merge into an Arab federation.

A U.N. representative said neither Egypt nor Libya had requested a Security Council meeting to deal with the fighting, which has continued for the past 10 days.

THE BASE, LOCATED just outside Tobruk, the former home of Libyan kings and the site of major battles during World War II, is just inland from the Mediterranean coast.

The Friday attack followed a major day-long battle Thursday in which Egyptian troops occupied the Libyan border town of Masa-ed for 24 hours, shot down two Libyan planes, destroyed 40 tanks and captured 42 soldiers and "saboteurs."

In his speech, Sadat called Khadafy a "maniac" and a "madman" and ex-

4 businessmen killed in pro 'hit'

by NANCY GOTLER

Four businessmen were found shot to death early Friday in an elevator of a Park Ridge office building in what police called a "professional assassination."

The victims, Joseph LaRose, 35, of 1830 W. Thornhill Rd., Inverness; his brother-in-law, John Vische, 32, of 17800 Wood Terrace Rd., Country Club Hills; Donald Marchbanks, 53, of 12926 Greenwood, Blue Island; and Malcolm Russell, 36, of 515 W. Grant Ave., Chicago, were found in the garage elevator at 216 W. Higgins Rd.

Det. Rocco Rinaldi of the Chicago Police Dept., called the murders "methodical" and "professional." He said 25 or 30 shots, probably from a .22-caliber gun, were fired into the elevator at close range sometime after 10 p.m. Thursday.

MOST OF THE crime syndicate figures slain in Chicago in recent years have been killed with .22-caliber pistols.

"The men may have been led into the elevator one by one and shot," Rinaldi said. "All were shot in the head, neck and chest. Four men wouldn't just stand there and be shot. It had to be persons they trusted," he said.

Rinaldi said the gunmen apparently were "looking for something" because the right coat pockets of three of the men had been ripped open.

Robbery was not a motive, he said, because the victims' rings and wallets were not taken. "They (the killers) apparently found what they were looking for because they did not tear the pocket of the fourth victim," Rinaldi said.

Police theorize the men were shot as they left a meeting of U.S. Universal Inc., a burglar alarm and smoke detector sales company owned by LaRose and Russell. Vische and Marchbanks were employes.

ALTHOUGH police said they have no information that the burglary alarm and smoke detector business was "suspicious," an FBI spokesman said Russell was under investigation for a confidence game involving another company, Steel Liquidation Service, 4118 W. Lawrence Ave., Chicago.

Park Ridge Police Chief Joseph Moffitt said the men were last seen at 10 p.m. Thursday by two associates who left the meeting ahead of them.

The bodies were discovered at 7:56 a.m. Friday by Jenny Lescek, an employe of U.S. Universal. She became hysterical and ran screaming to a service station across the street and asked the owner, John Lukas, to call the police.

Bruce L. Shershon, an employe of Mirro Aluminum Co., arrived for work in the same building and opened the elevator door.

"I pushed the elevator button and when the door opened I saw them," Shershon said. "It was unbelievable. I

LaRose a 'mystery man' to Inverness neighbors

To his Inverness neighbors, Joseph LaRose, 35, was a mystery man.

"I don't think you're going to learn much about him because nobody knows them," said an Inverness resident living behind the home where LaRose and his wife, Patricia, lived.

H. A. Wagner, 1896 Thornhill Rd, who lives two houses west of the LaRose home at 1896 Thornhill Rd., said, "My wife and I have never seen them."

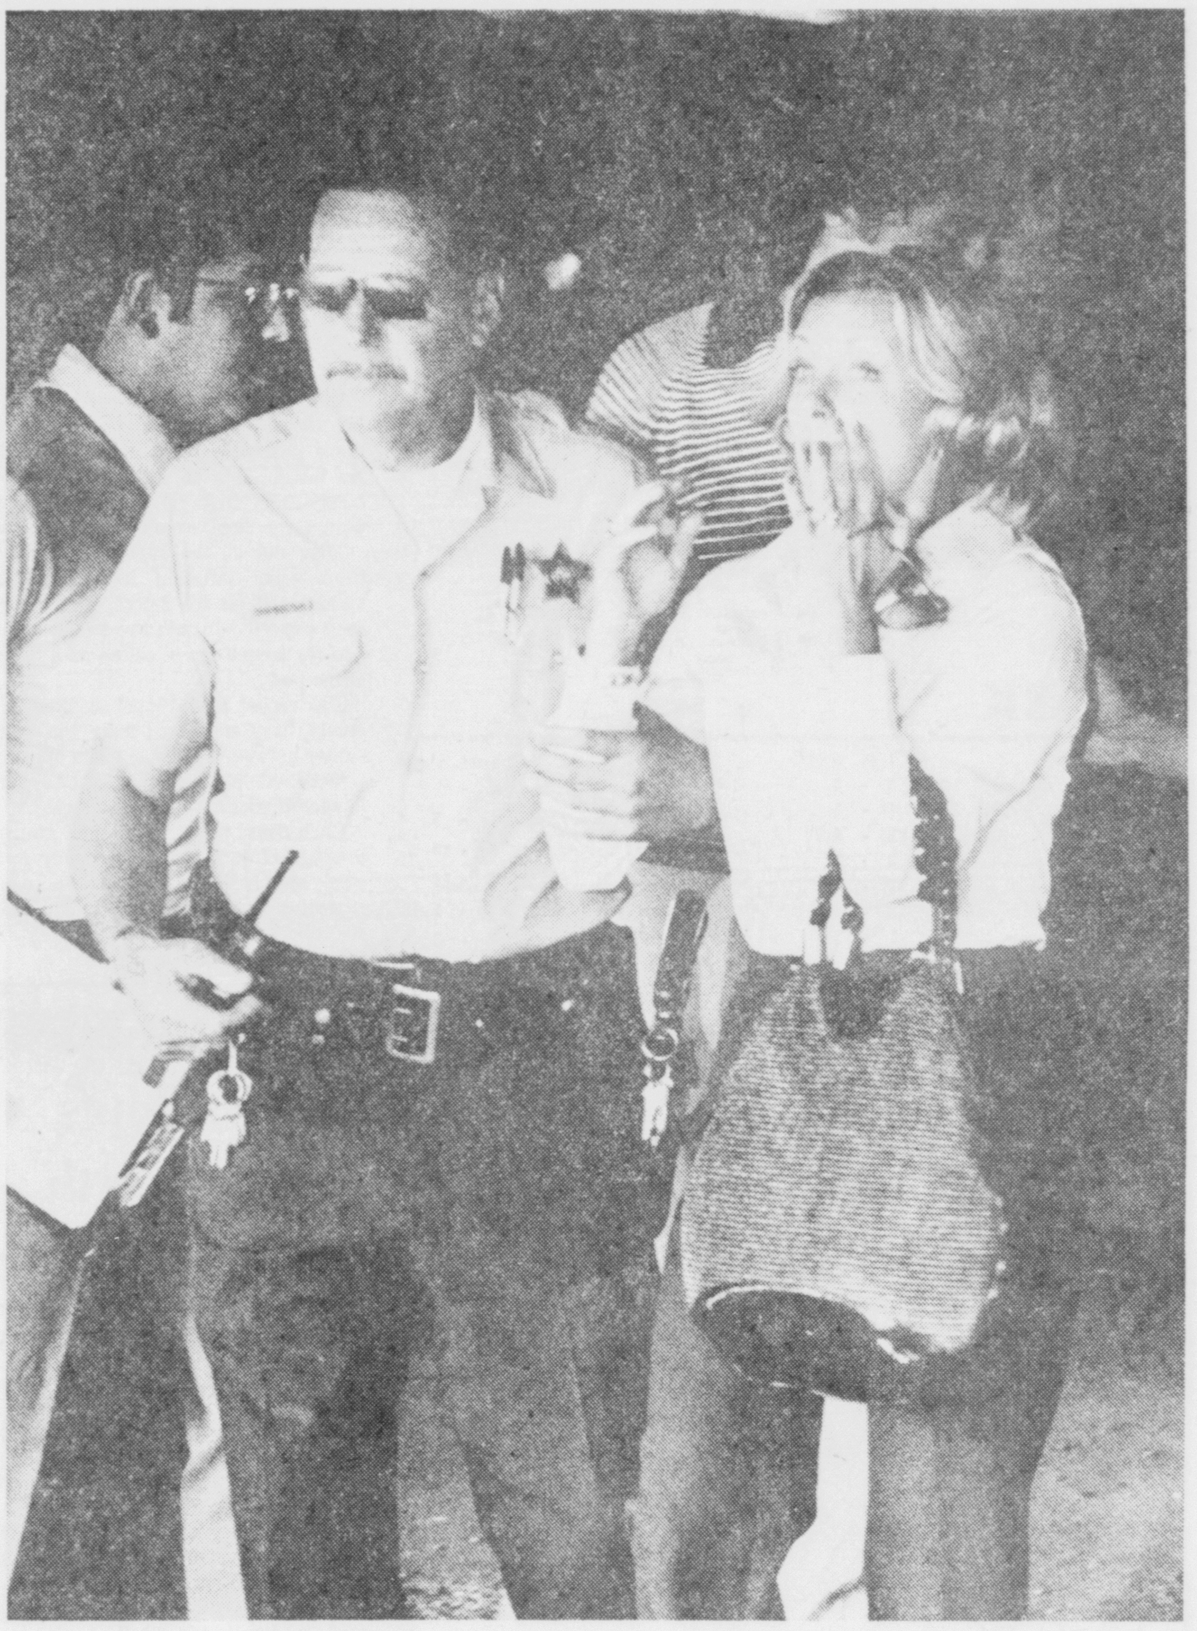
"We occasionally refer to them as the mysterious LaRoses," Wagner said. "Most of us around here know quite a bit about each other, but we don't know much about the LaRoses."

WHAT THE NEIGHBORS do know about the LaRoses is that they moved to Inverness in 1974 into a two-story house that had been beautifully repaired after it had been damaged by lightning.

The LaRoses moved to Inverness from Chicago, according to Eleanor Watson of Arthur T. McIntosh Co., the main developer of Inverness.

"They seemed like a very nice couple," Mrs. Watson said. The couple had no children.

One woman from another part of the village described herself as "a very dear friend of theirs," but refused further comment after a visit to the LaRose home Friday evening.



PATRICIA LaROSE gasps in horror after she is told that her husband, Joseph, was murdered in the elevator of a Park Ridge office building. Police have termed the killings "professional."

Anderson says Logan's the one

by KEN VANDERBEEK

Leo Anderson Friday identified the man who allegedly killed his wife.

Pointing his finger at Marion Logan seated across the courtroom, Anderson testified:

"He's the one. He's the one who shot and killed my wife."

The 52-year-old Buffalo Grove man spoke methodically in a hoarse voice, caused by scar tissue near his larynx, which was ripped open by one of his assailant's bullets minutes before his wife, Phyllis, 51, was killed June 13, 1976.

DURING ANDERSON'S testimony, friends and relatives sat motionless with their eyes on him and holding hands. The courtroom was quiet.

One jury member cried as Anderson outlined with preciseness, details of the violence that occurred around his car the night of the killing.

Anderson told the jury how he, his wife and three of their six children sat in their car stalled near a rain-flooded viaduct on W. 69th Street near Harvard after being forced off the Dan Ryan Expressway by heavy rain.

"I remember someone from another car saying something about windows being broken up ahead after we got off the expressway," Anderson said. "Then, all of a sudden we were surrounded by several black youths and one was demanding $10.

"I REFUSED TO give him any money and I rolled up my window," he said. "Then I tried to turn around but the water was too high.

"Suddenly our car was surrounded again and rocks were breaking our windows. My wife told the kids to duck — that no one would get hurt. But in moments I saw this man shooting at us," he said.

Anderson was wounded in the neck and shoulder by two shots.

"My wife tried to help me but the gunman came within three feet of the car and started shooting at her," Anderson testified.

Mrs. Anderson died when a bullet pierced her jaw and entered her skull.

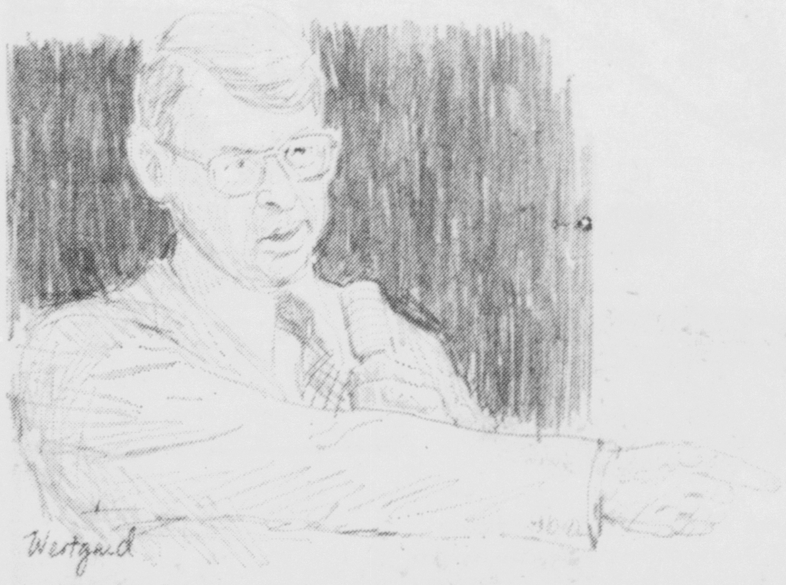
THE COURTROOM filled with voices after Anderson finished his testimony. Anderson's friends and family seemed relieved, as did State's Attorneys Thomas Callum and Harry Wilson.

Defense attorney Irwin Frazin was less relaxed.

Cross examining Mr. Anderson was probably the toughest task I've ever had in the courtroom," Frazin told reporters afterward. "I wanted to crawl under a table."

Anderson's daughter, Elizabeth, 17, also testified Friday and identified Logan as the man who killed her mother.

The trial resumes at 10:30 a.m. today in the Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.



LEO ANDERSON identifies Marion Logan as the alleged killer of his wife.

Court hints new hearing on Viator

The U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals hinted Friday it may grant Arlington Heights' request for a new hearing on the village's refusal to rezone property near St. Viator High School for a low- and moderate-income housing project.

The court has ordered attorneys for the Metropolitan Housing Development Corp., a non-profit developer of low-cost housing, to file a reply by Aug. 1 to the village's request that the court's full eight-judge panel rehear the case.

A three-judge panel of the court ruled July 7 the village must find a suitable alternative to the Viator site or be found in violation of federal fair housing laws.

VILLAGE ATTY. Jack M. Siegel called the order "unusual" and "encouraging."

"Maybe there's something stirring down there," he said.

"It is unusual, in general, for the court (of appeals) to order the plaintiffs to reply to a request for rehearing because normally such requests are declined," Steve Kehoe, deputy clerk for the court of appeals, said.

"But in a case of this complexity and importance, I'm not sure it's so unusual," Kehoe said.

Willis Caruso, attorney for the MHDC, said he was not surprised at the order he submit a reply to the village's request for a new hearing, but said he does not see it as an indication of how the court will rule on the request.

"I THINK THEY'RE just giving us a chance to respond to Mr. Siegel. That's only fair," Caruso said.

"I do think it is conceivable in a case of this kind that the court might rehear it. This decision does have sub-

Sex education in schools is a failure, expert says

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—Sex education in U.S. schools has failed because courses concentrate on anatomy and reproduction "when what the kids really want to know about are human relationships," a researcher said Friday.

Sylvia S. Hacker based her conclusion on a doctoral thesis on the study increase in the number of unwanted pregnancies among teen-agers while the national birth rate declined in an age of "sexual enlightenment." She said, simply, that teen-agers were not among the enlightened.

"Sex education classes in this country are a failure," said Miss Hacker, who operates University of Michigan's health clinic.

"THE CLASSES are dealing with anatomy and reproduction when what the kids really want to know about are human relationships."

Miss Hacker said typical concerns in her interviews with 38 sexually experienced young people aged 15 to 23 were: "What will she think if I try something?" and "How far should I let him go?"

She said youths who had tried sex, both with and without contraceptives, indicated a general desire to avoid pregnancy, but with varying degrees of self-consciousness about the use of contraceptives.

"If you carry one with you, it's like you're asking for it," she quoted one female subject.

Others simply had inadequate information, Miss Hacker said, and were judged less likely to practice birth control.

"SEX AND contraception are still relatively taboo subjects in our post-Puritanical culture," she said. "Even the most liberal parents tend to view sex as a private matter and the schools treat it as a dry academic subject.

"As a result, the kids turn to their peers, where an enormous amount of mythology is still being perpetrated. For example, some believe you can't get pregnant 'the first time.' "

Miss Hacker said before the situation can be improved in the schools, the adult population at large must "acknowledge sex as a legitimate natural function and learn to discuss it comfortably with young people."

Ony then, she said, can the schools properly perform their function — "help youngsters get in touch with their own feelings and values."

Woman killed in crash with police

A Chicago woman was killed Friday evening and three persons injured when the auto in which she was riding collided with an Illinois State police car north of Wauconda.

Elizabeth Kaiser, 56, of 5349 N. Pueblo, Chicago, was dead on arrival at Condell Memorial Hospital, Libertyville.

The accident occurred at 7 p.m. on Ill. Rte. 12, one mile north of Wauconda.

In critical condition at Condell Hospital is Joseph K. Kaiser, 3. He is the grandchild of Mrs. Kaiser and her husband, Mathew, 60, the driver of the auto.

Kaiser was in stable condition Friday at Condell with multiple cuts and bruises.

Insatisfactory condition at McHenry Hospital was Illinois State Patrolman John Emrich. Emrich, of McHenry, suffered head injuries and was being kept overnight for observation, said a hospital spokesman.

Illinois State police said the Kaiser vehicle was traveling north when it turned left at Case Road into the path of Emrich's car, traveling south.

Illinois State police Friday said no charges had been filed pending an investigation of the accident.

America's sweet tooth takes bite out of wallets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans in 1976 chewed their way through more chocolate bars, caramels, peanut brittle, licorice and other types of candy than they have since 1968, a Commerce Dept. report said Friday.

They did it, the report said, at a time when inflation had taken a serious toll on the 5-cent candy bar, soon expected to join the nickel cigar and the 5-cent cup of coffee as a thing of the past.

The report said 78 per cent of all candy bars now sold cost the consumer between 11 and 15 cents apiece.

"THE NICKEL candy bar is an endangered species," the report said.

Each man, woman and child ate an average of 16.7 pounds of candy last year, the first time per capita consumption has gone up in eight years, the report said.

The peak year was 1968 when per capita consumption averaged 20.3 pounds. Sales had been sagging until last year.

Over-all, confectioners increased their shipments 3.3 per cent last year to 3.5 billion pounds, the report said.

OF THE TOTAL, just 1.2 million pounds were candy bars that sold for a nickel, compared with 16.7 million pounds in 1971.

The report said although sugar prices have been moving down for the past two years, "cocoa prices soared skyward" and canceled the effects of lower-cost sugar. Other production factors also have increased.

Illinois has assumed the title of America's candy kitchen by producing 27.7 per cent of the nation's supply. Pennsylvania is second with 20.6 per cent and the report said it soon may overtake Illinois.

The industry, which employs 56,700 persons, apparently has determined that it has its foot in the door for selling more candy and is trying to boost consumption back to its high of 1968.

The industry is in the midst of a promotional campaign centered on a slogan that may increase business in dentist offices and produce frowns on the faces of mothers trying to protect their children's teeth. It reads:

"Candy is delicious food — enjoy some every day."

Serpent saluted as town touts monster myth

PERRY, N.Y. (UPI) — In 1855 a giant sea serpent poked its ugly head out of the waters of Silver Lake and scared six fishermen out of their hip boots.

No matter that the whole thing turned out to be a big hoax two years later — the mighty Sea Serpent of Silver Lake is still very much alive in this tranquil community of about 4,600 between Buffalo and Rochester.

In fact, Perry has been honoring its mythical monster for the past 25 years with an annual Silver Lake Sea Serpent Festival. This year's shindig is slated for July 24-30.

ACCORDING TO TOWN legend, the serpent was about 60 feet tall, 100 feet long, and has shiny, dark green skin with yellow spots, and flaming red eyes. It was sighted in the lake several times that summer of 1855.

"We're told that vast crowds of people would line up around the lake each night to wait for the serpent to appear," festival official Rose Andolina said.

Occasionally the serpent would rise 10 feet out of the water, sending onlookers scurrying away in terror. Then, just as mysteriously, the serpent stopped appearing.

TWO YEARS later the townsfolk found out why when they picked through the burned out Walker's Hotel and found the remains of the canvass monster, which had been rigged with a pumping system to make it rise in the water.

"The hotel owner, A. B. Walker, apparently dreamed up the monster as a way of drumming up some business for his place," Mrs. Andolina said.

The serpent was forgotten until 1952, when the local Jaycees decided to bring it back in a slightly smaller version made of papier mache and fiberglass.

Every year since then, the new demon has been the center of attention at the week-long celebration of sidewalk sales, talent shows and concerts.

BUT THIS YEAR, there's a problem.

Some rats got into the back room of Perry's old, crumbling town hall where the monster is stored and ate him.

"There's only the frame left," Mrs. Andolina said.

So for this year's festival, they'll use a small model of the demon.

"One of our townspeople has offered to rebuild him for next year's festival, but it will cost $600," Mrs. Andolina said. "We're also thinking of buying an inflatable serpent, so we'll never have any more storage problems.

Another nice day . . .

4 businessmen slain in 'professional assassination' thought they were asphyxiated and then I saw a lot of blood. I just couldn't imagine four men being murdered."

MOFFITT SAID apparently no one reported any of the victims missing when they failed to come home last night.

About 9:30 a.m. LaRose's wife, Patricia, drove to the office, apparently to check on her husband and was told of his murder. She identified the body and was quickly ushered into the building to be questioned by police.

Cook County medical examiner Robert J. Stein is scheduled to perform autopsies on all four bodies this morning.

Meanwhile police from Park Ridge, Chicago and Cook County are investigating the background of the victims, trying to determine whether they had any enemies.

JOSEPH LaROSE MOVED into his well-kept Inverness home in 1974. Rarely seen by neighbors, LaRose and his wife were described by one neighbor as the "mysterious LaRoses."

Communist party expels gang of 4, restores Teng

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Chinese Communist Party Central Committee Friday restored twice-purged Teng Hsiao-ping to his No. 3 ranking and expelled "once and for all" Mao Tse-tung's widow and her colleagues in the "Gang of Four" from the Communist party.

The plenary session also ratified Hua Kuo-feng's status as leader of the world's largest nation, declaring Comrade Hua is "Chairman Mao's good student and successor and our good leader and supreme commander."

All the votes were unanimous, Radio Peking reported in a communique.

ALL THE ACTIONS were expected, but they represented fulfillment of one of the greatest upheavals in the Chinese Communist party's 56-year history. The Central Committee endorsed Hua's "rectification" campaign to root out an unknown number of followers of the "Gang of Four" at all levels of Chinese life.

Thousands of residents of Peking and other cities, alerted by pink wall posters plastered across the capital during the past few days and the radio's advance notice of a special announcement, swarmed into the capital's streets and celebrated the news, shouting and waving flags.

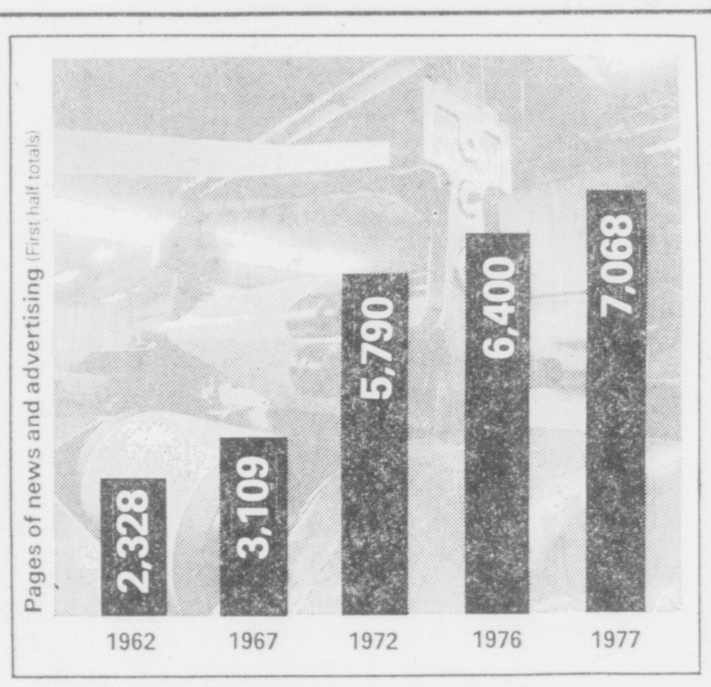
Peking Television, in an unusual broadcast, showed scenes of the plenum at the same time the communique was being read over Peking Radio.

Teng, who was stripped of all his party and government posts in April 1976, and branded an "unrepentant capitalist roader," walked in the third position behind Hua, the party chairman and premier, and Yeh Chien-ying, party vice chairman and defense minister.

THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE voted to restore Teng to all of his posts: member of the Central Committee, the committee's Political Bureau and the Politburo Standing Committee, vice chairman of the party, vice chairman of the committee's Military Commission, chief of the general staff of the armed forces and vice premier.

Teng, who is about 74, first was disgraced in mid-1968, during China's Cultural Revolution.

His return to power assures the post-Mao leadership will continue to pursue pragmatic policies aimed at getting the national economy back on track and elevating China to superpower status by the end of the century.



We're sharing our unprecedented growth with you

During the first half of 1977, The Herald published 7,068 pages of news and advertising.

That's an increase of 668 pages over 1976. An increase of 1,278 pages over 1972. And an increase of 3,706 pages over 1967.

A growth of 112 per cent in 10 years!

A challenge . . . and an opportunity.

The Herald's unprecedented growth has given us the opportunity to give you a complete daily newspaper.

In just the past year, we have added these news and feature items of interest to you and your family:

- Full coverage of national and international events
- Professional sports coverage
- A new business section, with weekly summaries of stock activities on the major exchanges
- A new fashion section called Flair
- A daily TV column highlighting television programming
- Movie and restaurant reviews
- A new home section called Homestyles

Woman, 94, recalls earlier floods

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Daise Heslop has been through three devastating floods in her 94 years, but she says she still wouldn't trade Johnstown for the world.

"I love Johnstown, I really love it," said Mrs. Heslop, a survivor of the Johnstown floods of 1889, 1936 and now 1977.

"I wouldn't live any place else. I love the people here, the scenery, and the temperatures in the spring, summer, fall and winter.

"I don't know how many more floods I'm going to see," she said. "I hope to pass on before I see any more floods."

BORN MAY 6, 1883, Mrs. Heslop was six years old, the youngest of five daughters of Jobe and Eleanor Morgan, when the Memorial Day flood of '89 struck. That deluge killed 2,209 and was one of the worst disasters of the 19th Century. Her father and grandmother were among the victims.

"I guess I wass too young to be scared," Mrs. Heslop recalled. "My father called us over to the window to show us the water rising. He told all us kids to get on the third floor, but a log caught his arm and he drowned."

Mrs. Heslop said a man — "don't ask me who it was, I don't remember" — carried her over rooftops to safety. Along the way she remembers seeing babies dropping from their mothers' arms into the raging waters.

After the St. Patrick's Day flood of '36, in which 25 died, Mrs. Heslop was separated from her husband for a day. But she incurred neither injuries nor property damage.

"I was lucky that year," she said.

She said she was in the Moxham section of Johnstown at the time, serving on a jury. Her husband was in downtown Johnstown with their two sons, William, now 67, and Gale, now 65.

Mrs. Heslop was fortunate this time, too. The Allegheny Lutheran Home in suburban Westmont, where Mrs. Heslop now resides, was spared.

"I know floods in and out," she said.

55 believed dead in Johnstown

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — The death toll in the worst flood to devastate the Conemaugh River Valley since 1889 rose sharply Friday with discovery of more bodies in huge stacks of debris in the city's Hornerstown section.

The bodies were removed from the debris near a plant owned by Cambria Chair Inc. to push the unofficial death toll to at least 55, according to the Johnstown Tribune-Democrat. Fourteen of the victims were unidentified.

State police set the official death toll at 46. The daily newspaper said its death toll was pegged on an actual body count.

MORE THAN 100 PERSONS were reported missing, including an estimated 60 who were believed to have drowned when the Laurel Run Dam broke and sent a 12-foot wall of water thundering through the village of Tanneryville in West Taylor Township.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., who toured the area Friday, estimated maximum property damage at $250 million, while Gov. Milton Shapp set damage at $200 million.

Greg Schneiders, President Carter's personal representative at the site, said the flooded region was "a disaster of major proportions." He promised federal aid would be sped to the area to help the thousands of homeless.

SCHNEIDERS MET with Shapp, Schweiker and state and local officials at the Johnstown airport high in the hills above the city to coordinate relief assistance.

"The communities look like they were bombed out," Shapp said.

After the meeting with federal officials, Schweiker said 150 homes were destroyed, 521 suffered major damages and 2,425 incurred minor damage. Eight businesses were obliterated and 60 incurred major damage, he said.

30 to renew marriage vows

• The Rev. William Herman usually marries couples one at a time, but tonight the pastor of the Rolling Meadows Community Church will marry 30 couples at a $20-a-couple dinner dance ceremony at the Lancer Steak House restaurant, 50 E. Algonquin Rd., Schaumburg. The couples won't mind sharing their ceremonies because each has been married by Herman before in separate weddings. In the 18 years Herman has been pastor in the city, he has married about 700 couples. He believes the renewal of vows will "recapture some of the spirit they had when they first got married." The event was designed to raise funds for the church's mission in India and for local organizations, such as Clearbrook Center and Northwest Opportunity Center. However, Herman said the church probably will just break even. "It's hard to say right now," Herman said. "Maybe we'll get some contributions."

Victor, who will be 9 years old Aug. 1, was born in South Korea and adopted by the Levines of 1522 N. Kaspar Ave., Arlington Heights, five years ago. Since then, he has forgotten his Korean vocabulary, joined a Little League team and his mother says considers himself American. Next week's ceremony in Chicago will make it official.

Gleason turned to Miami after the Miami Beach Tourist Authority balked at paying $15,000 of the production costs.

horted the Libyan people to overthrow him.

Sadat said the fighting Thursday had taught Khadafy "a lesson which he will never forget."

"We are ready to repeat this lesson unless this maniac stops playing with fire," Sadat told a cheering rally to celebrate the 24th anniversary of the coup led by the late Gamal Abdel Nasser which overthrew the Egyptian monarchy.

"I told Khadafy if your objective is to prove that you are stronger than Egypt, we will hit you," Sadat said. "If you were instigated by others we will hit you."

SADAT SAID the border clashes began Tuesday when Libyan tanks, backed by artillery fire, attacked an Egyptian border post and captured 14 policemen.

"This is what I call playing with fire and, by Allah, I could not restrain my armed forces. Today and yesterday, they taught him (Khadafy) a lesson which he will never forget," Sadat said.

"We are ready to teach him the same lesson again," Sadat said.

The Libyan news agency, in a report monitored in Beirut, first announced the bombing raid and said "Egyptian forces are now carrying out a large-scale armored attack on Libyan soil."

"Egyptian forces this afternoon (Friday) launched air attacks on Gamal Abdel Nasser air base and dropped paratroopers on the village of Kasr El Jedi," the Libyan report said in its brief dispatch.

9 plead innocent to sales scheme

Nine of the 11 men accused of running a phony distributorship scheme from Des Plaines pleaded innocent Friday before U.S. District Judge Frank J. McGarr. The two remaining defendants are in California and will be arraigned before Judge McGarr upon their arrival in Chicago. The 11 are accused of mail and wire fraud and conspiracy involving a million dollar business that offered to sell exclusive distributorships of deodorant spray products and burglar alarms. They ran two firms, National Products Research and Development Corp. and Market Research International Corp., from 2720 Des Plaines Ave., and 3158 N. River Rd., from 1972 to 1974.

The nine who were arraigned include Jack Lang, William Kraus, Walter Soots, Robert Doebler, Gerald Levin, Joseph Rosdal, Joseph Schoettlin, Rick Corder and Ronald Nelson. Lang, Doebler and Nelson are from the Chicago area. The two remaining defendants are Ralph Smith and Dennis Moore. McGarr set Sept. 28 for the next court hearing.

Local man convicted in robbery

Two Chicago area men have been convicted in the armed robbery of a Herrin tavern owner and his family last Dec. 3. Guilty verdicts were returned Thursday night in Marion against Ronald Wolf, 42, Harvey, and Frank Velillari, 38, Mount Prospect, by a Williamson County Circuit Court jury that deliberated a little over three hours. Judge W. A. Lewis did not set a date for sentencing. The defense said it would file an appeal.

100 charged in fencing operation

Nearly 100 persons have been charged and about $250,000 in stolen goods recovered in an undercover investigation of home invasion, burglary and fencing operations in the Joliet area, Will County State's Atty. Edward Petka said Friday. The investigation centered in the "Try-City Insurance Salvage Store," a storefront operation established by investigators in an industrial area of Joliet. The store was equipped with one-way mirrors and video taping equipment, which was used to record persons who entered the establishment to sell stolen goods. Petka said 95 persons were implicated by fencing operations conducted by local authorities and agents of the U.S. Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Forty-seven persons were named in 44 indictments for crimes against property, he said. Arrest warrants were issued for 24 others, 17 juveniles were implicated and other suspects still are not being identified, he said.

Man pleads innocent to murder

Everett Bowen pleaded innocent in Chicago Friday to charges of murder and arson in the deaths of his three children, even though he previously gave police a written statement admitting he set the blaze. Bowen's children, Sherrie, 12, Julie 8, and Mark, 5, died in a fire in their uncle's Northlake home. Their mother, Bowen's estranged wife, and another child escaped from the home. Bowen, 34, who lives in an unincorporated area of Leyden Township, was separated from his wife June 1. The fire occurred July 2.

Branch workers maintain pickets

Some 3,000 employes of the E. J. Brach and Sons Inc., a Chicago candy company, refused to cross picket lines at the factory Friday even though union members ratified a new contract. Union members voted 1,256-914 Thursday to ratify the new contract, a union leader said. However, about 100 of the strikers marched in front of the plant late Thursday, chanting, "Workers united will never be defeated." The marchers said they were angry union officials did not tell workers the results of the contract vote and instead told company officials who posted the results for the workers. About 20 men picketed entrances to the plant Friday.

8 teens injured as trucks collide

A semi-truck rammed the rear of a flatbed truck carrying 14 teen-agers Friday, throwing the youths onto U.S. Rte. 51. Eight teen-agers were hospitalized, four in critical condition, authorities said. The accident occurred about a half mile north of El Paso. The youths were going to a corn detasseling job. Critically injured and taken to St. Francis Hospital in Peoria were Kathy McKay of Minonk and Brian Bauer and Todd Skoleck, both of El Paso. Tom Armstrong, El Paso, was listed in critical condition at St. Joseph's Hospital in Bloomington. Three other youths at St. Joseph's were in fair condition and one was in good condition. Others were treated and released.

Pernice's racing license revoked

The Illinois Racing Board Friday revoked the horse racing license of Du Page County land developer Salvatore A. Pernice, who pleaded guilty to pistol whipping a man last January. Pernice, 43, Addison, who owns four race horses, will be excluded from racing until January for actions judged detrimental to the conduct of racing, racing board secretary William Masterson said. Pernice's attorney, Stephen P. Carponelli, said he would ask for a stay of the order before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Arthur Dunne. Pernice originally was charged with aggravated battery and intimidation for an attack on a lumber company employe in Addison, but he pleaded guilty to battery, a misdemeanor. Pernice also was involved in a shooting July 2 in Du Page County in which a horse racing associate, James Wondergem, 34, was killed. The shooting was in a trailer owned by Pernice at a construction site in Addison. Witnesses said Wondergem pulled out a .38-caliber revolver during a quarrel with a third man and Pernice grabbed the gun to prevent him from shooting the other man. The gun went off accidentally, witnesses said.

Former NIU professor dies

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Dr. Martin Diamond, a former political scientist at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, died of an apparent heart attack Friday in Washington. He was 57. Diamond, who had served in NIU's political science department since 1971, was once named by Time magazine as one of the 10 greatest teachers in the United States. He also made several appearances on national Public Television programs. Diamond was in the process of moving his family to Washington, D.C., where he had accepted an academic post at Georgetown University. He was scheduled to testify before a Senate committee Friday. A native of New York City, Diamond is survived by his widow, Ann, and four children. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Ex-police officer's killing called professional hit

A former Chicago police commander who served a prison term for shaking down tavern owners and testified against police colleagues facing similar charges was shot to death Friday on a North Side street in Chicago.

Mark C. Thanasouras, 49, was struck by shotgun blasts in the face and chest as he approached his girl friend's apartment.

"It was an assassination," police Homicide Commander Joseph DiLeonardi said. "Nothing was taken from him, no jewelry or money . . . We don't know who was out to get him but it was a professional job."

DiLEONARDI AND federal investigators said they knew of no specific motive for Thanasouras' death. They said he was not currently involved in any investigation and was not scheduled to testify in any prosecution, so his enforced silence would not have been a motive.

"Anytime you're associated with people in organized crime," former U.S. Atty. Samuel K. Skinner said, "you risk your former friends becoming enemies, and this appears to be an organized crime type hit."

Thanasouras and some of his vice squad officers were indicted in 1973 on charges they operated a tavern shakedown ring in his West Side Austin District. Prosecturos said he and the others involved in the ring netted as much as $275,000.

He entered a guilty plea in February, 1974, and was sentenced to serve 42 months in prison and fined $20,000 He was released after 18 months when he agreed to testify against four former district watch commanders who also faced shakedown charges.

THE FOUR WERE acquitted Aug. 12, 1976, despite Thanasouras' testimony.

While he was held in Terminal Island, Calif., prison, Thanasouras charged he had been marked for death by Black Panther party members angered because he had directed police activity during the 1968 Chicago ghetto riots. He was transferred to another facility.

Until rumors began of his participation in shakedowns, Thanasouras had made a remarkable record in the police department. He joined the force in 1956 and promptly attracted public attention by capturing a sex offender between his police academy classes.

IBI hampered by staff, car misuse: report

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A report issued by the state auditor general's office says the misuse of personnel and state cars by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation hampered efficient state drug enforcement in the mid-1970s.

In a report released Thursday, Auditor General Robert G. Cronson said the improper transfer of narcotics personnel from the Illinois Bureau of Investigation to the Office of Special Investigations cost drug control operations about $100,000 in salaries and loss of qualified personnel. The transfers took place from June 1974 to January 1977, a spokesman for the auditor general said.

The Office of Special Investigations was started by former Gov. Daniel Walker to investigate corruption in the executive branch.

CRONSON SAID poor coordination between the IBI and the state police also created problems. The two agencies sometimes did work on the same case, unaware of the other's work, he said. The report said a "definite" lack of communication existed between the agencies.

Cronson also said the IBI assigned unmarked investigative cars to nonenforcement personnel with office duties, thus leading to a possible misuse of the autos.

"We found no indication that the assignment of a vehicle was justified by the anticipation of field duties nor were there any reports to indicate that the vehicle usage was business related," the report said.

Cronson was directed by the legislature to conduct the audit, which was prepared as a special management audit of the law enforcement department.

Walker forms outdoor club

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Former Gov. Daniel Walker says he is putting together the Dan Walker Outdoor Club, Inc., to find good hunting and fishing locations across the state for city shut-ins.

Walker said today the club is still in the formation stages but has been incorporated as a forprofit corporation. Under the concept, the club would charge $250 annual dues for persons whose applications are accepted. The club members would then be able to hunt, fish, camp or canoe in areas leased by the club from farmers. The club also plans one-or two-day trips to the areas.

The club already has acquired a "substantial" amount of hunting and fishing rights to areas across the state, Walker said.

Walker said he does not know yet how much of his own money is invested in the club, but he said it is a "substantial sum, certainly in the thousands of dollars."

"I do want to stress that this has absolutely no political significance, it's strictly a business venture," Walker said.

Frenchmen's Cove 'pit' a drag for neighbors

RESIDENTS ALONG Stanford Lane in Buffalo Grove are complaining that this paved retention basin for the Frenchmen's Cove development in Arlington Heights is being used for drag racing. One resident said a fence should be put up around the basin.

Residents call it "the pit" and say it has been nothing but problems for the past four years.

First there was the standing water and weeds. That was partially corrected when the pit was paved to eliminate the standing water.

But now there is a new problem — drag racing.

THE PIT IS the retention basin on the Frenchmen's Cove property in Arlington Heights. The residents are Buffalo Grove homeowners on Stanford Lane adjacent to the Frenchmen's Cove development.

That is still another problem. Because the retention basin is in Arlington Heights, the Buffalo Grove homeowners are forced to take their complaints to Arlington Heights officials and they say they often get lost in a bureaucratic shuffle.

"One official says he talked to the other (from the other village), the other says he never heard from him, and nothing gets done," said Catherine Roderick, 600 Stanford Ln. Mrs. Roderick has spent the last four years trying to get the basin cleaned of weeds, stagnant water and mosquitoes.

But weeds still grow 6 feet tall around it and dirt still washes into it when it rains, she said. The only thing that developer Edward Schwartz has done is to pave the bottom of the basin to take care of the water problem and that has caused the latest problem.

"WE WERE SITTING on our deck Saturday when I saw this car zing into the basin, he drove all around it and then up and down the hills here," Mrs. Roderick said.

A neighbor called the Arlington Heights police, but they say there isn't too much they can do to prevent the racing.

"Unless you post a car up there there's no way I can assure a car can't get in there," said Capt. Paul Buckholz, Arlington Heights deputy police chief. "This happens at other basins, too."

Mrs. Roderick said the answer is for Schwartz to build a fence around the basin, which is eventually supposed to become tennis courts.

BUT WHEN contacted by another Stanford resident, Schwartz said he didn't know when or if he would put a fence up even after the courts are put in.

"The only thing we can require him to do is cut the weeds," said Ted Lindstrom, Arlington Heights superintendent of construction.

2 riflemen take $75 from station

Two men armed with a rifle took $75 Friday night from the Village Pump gas station, 301 E. Central Rd., Arlington Heights.

The robbery occurred when a gold-colored car with two men drove into the station at about 9:30. Police said one of the men, who was wearing a ski mask, got out of the car and demanded money from an attendant while the other man, the driver, displayed a rifle. The attendant gave them the money and the car sped away.

The robbers were described as white and about 19 years old. Police said the attendant could not identify the car's license plate number.

Tension ends with call from Johnstown

The tension ended Friday for Alfonso C. Zito.

It ended with a phone call.

For two days, he had been one of the unmentioned victims of the Johnstown flood in Pennsylvania.

He doesn't live there. He lives in an apartment in Elk Grove Village. But he grew up in Johnstown, and a sister and two brothers still live there.

ZITO HAD NO idea what had happened to them. Even after limited telephone service was restored to Johnstown, the lines going in were packed and residents of the town were advised not to call out unless it was an emergency.

All the while, Zito worried. He had a picture in his mind of his sister trying to drive up from her home in the valley by the river against a wall of water. His two brothers both live up on the hill, so Zito wasn't as concerned about them. But one brother does commercial work for Sears and Zito could see him trapped inside a mine.

"You never know where these people are," Zito said. "There are a lot of things that go through your mind."

FOR A WHILE, after he heard news of the flood on Wednesday, he considered going to Johnstown. Yet, it was a long way to go with no promise of success.

"I was tempted to go out there," he said, "but with the roads, I didn't know if you could get through."

So, at about 7 p.m. Wednesday, Zito began using the phone. He had three numbers. But they were all answered with recorded messages, advising that the storm had knocked out communications and to try again later.

He spent all of Wednesday night dialing those three numbers. There was no success. He phoned other relatives to see what they had heard. He phoned an aunt in Pittsburgh. She hadn't been able to get through. He called a couple of cousins. They had heard nothing either.

Finally, at 3 a.m. Thursday, he went to bed.

"I WAS JUST concerned about not getting through. I was wondering when we would ever be able to get through," Zito said. "I was just exhausted, and I fell asleep, and in the morning, I got up and started trying again."

He stayed by the phone again all day Thursday, making calls and waiting for calls. Still no luck. Friday morning, he began again. He also phoned a newspaper to see if it could help. He called the Red Cross and a few other organizations.

Zito is 56. He has lived in the Chicago area for 34 years since leaving Johnstown. He left in 1943 because he is hard of hearing and blind in one eye. There were no jobs in Johnstown, for him.

But it was hard to get the community out of his system. He still talks in glowing terms about Pennsylvania, and he takes trips back to Johnstown about once every year.

"Up until the war, it was a fantastic place to live. People were close there," Zito recalled. "We were close-knitted people."

THE ZITOS ALSO were a close-knit family. He had been taught love, respect and loyalty to family. He is not only close to those in Johnstown but to dozens of cousins throughout the country.

"We were brought up that way. It's family life," Zito said. "You go through the hardships together. You go through the good things together. You go through everything together.

"I don't know how to explain it. It's togetherness."

It is what made the not knowing, the waiting, hard.

But finally late Friday morning, the phone rang.

IT WAS ZITO'S niece, who lives in Chicago. Somehow, she had gotten through. Everybody was all right. The worst that had happened was one of his brothers getting water in his basement.

"It was a tremendous relief," Zito said. "It took a load off my shoulders. I can breathe again. It was hard to sleep at night."

He had heard.

AL ZITO OF Elk Grove Village spent two days trying to find out if his Johnstown, Pa., relatives were safe.

Newspapers no longer ride C&NW

"All the news that's fit to print" isn't fit to ride Chicago and North Western Ry. trains anymore.

The railroad has discontinued its long-standing service of dropping off Chicago and out-of-town newspapers at its suburban stops.

As a result, the Book Store, 5 W. Campbell St., Arlington Heights, has not been able to stock the New York Times for about two weeks.

"We simply were losing too much money on the deal," a spokesman for the North Western said Friday in explaining why the newspaper delivery was cut off. "Also, it didn't fit in with our other services since we don't allow passengers to carry bulky freight items on the trains," he said.

Chicago papers are now being delivered to the book store by truck. Other out-of-town papers are arriving by mail.

A store employe said arrangements are being sought to get the New York Times editions either by mail to the store or by plane to O'Hare Airport.

stantial impact on fair housing," he said.

Siegel's petition for a new hearing calls the July 7 decision a contradiction of the ruling issued by the U.S. Supreme Court in January. In that ruling, the court said the village's refusal in 1971 to rezone 15 acres at the corner of Euclid Avenue and Drury Lane for the MHDC project was not racially discriminatory and did not violate equal protection laws.

The high court, however, remanded a section of the case to the court of appeals for a ruling on whether the village had violated the Fair Housing Act of 1968.

Greek tanker explodes; oil out in Mississippi

CHALMETTE, La. (UPI) — A Greek tanker carrying more than 13.3 million gallons of crude oil exploded and burned in the Mississippi River Friday. The Coast Guard said a small amount of the cargo spilled into the waterway.

"It looks like 400 to 500 gallons — nothing really major," said Coast Guard spokesman Bob Baeton. He said containment booms were placed around the ship to prevent the oil from spreading.

The explosion occurred in the engine room of the 679-foot Dauntless Calcotronnis and sent crewmen scurrying overboard. Some swam to shore and others were rescued by boats.

Waves of hot, black oil bubbled out of deck vents and dripped into the river, which was closed for a nine-mile stretch below New Orleans. Spokesmen initially feared a second explosion or a leak through the hull might allow all the cargo to pollute the river.

THE ENGINE ROOM fire was put out and the situation declared under control at 3:45 p.m. 10 hours after the blaze started. Small fires continued to burn in other sections of the ship, but Baeton said firefighters expected to have them out Friday night.

Shipping also was expected to resume Friday night.

The ship was towed several miles down river by a Coast Guard cutter and a commercial tug. Then it was allowed to drift to an area where the riverfront is less populated. Baeton said it would be beached at the edge of the shipping channel so other vessels could pass unimpeded.

Baeton said barges may be brought alongside the vessel to unload its cargo.

The incident began three hours before President Carter arrived in Louisiana for an hour-long tour of an offshore oil drilling platform. Carter flew by helicopter to the rig, but apparently did not fly over the burning wreckage near a residential and industrial area.

The fire started in an engine room of the Calcotronnis shortly before dawn and quickly spread out of control. Thirty-four crewmen abandoned ship and either swam to shore or were plucked from the river by tugboats.

Carter ends trip South on oil rig

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — President Carter completed a three-state southern swing by visiting a Gulf Coast oil rig Friday and urged northern Atlantic seaboard states to intensify their own offshore oil exploration. Carter inspected a $38 million offshore drilling platform 88 miles southeast of New Orleans and made his request for more northern production before returning to Washington.

He recalled that, as governor of Georgia, he joined the governors of North and South Carolina in planning for "aggressive oil exploration and drilling and extraction off the coast of our Atla[illegible]board."

He s[illegible] hopes oil will be discover[illegible] be brought ashore to ref[illegible] with a minimum adverse [illegible]e environment.

"I ho[illegible]he states north of us will take the same approach and make careful plans accordingly so that we can continue with an aggressive exploration policy on the Atlantic seaboard as has been the case in the Gulf area," Carter said.

"I have been well-educated (Friday). I have been pleased with what I have learned and believe the future of oil exploration in our country has been shown to be successful and compatible with preservation of the quality of life style."

Pitching machines can cause injuries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An urgent warning about automatic baseball pitching machines which have accidentally gone off, causing two permanent and severe cases of brain damage and about 18 other injuries, has been issued by the Consumer Product Safety Commission. It identified the brands, which were made from 1963 to 1975, as "Blazer (Champ)," "Professional," "Range," "Pro-Trainer (Olympia)," and-or the "Dudley Automatic Pitching Machine." The agency said Thursday it has told its staff to go to court to seek a recall of the approximately 5,000 machines manufactured by Commercial Mechanisms Inc., Spring Park, Minn., and Kansas City, Mo. They were distributed to schools, clubs and other athletic organizations.

Porn filmmaker held in murders

YUCCA VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A pornographic movie maker who hired young women models to appear in nude lesbian pictures but instead allegedly filmed them in the throes of being killed was held Friday in lieu of $250,000 bond. Fred B. Douglas, 54, was charged with attempted murder in the making of "snuff" photographic stills, so-called because they depict an actual snuffing out of a life. Authorities searched the desert near Yucca Valley, 20 miles north of Palm Springs, Calif., for the bodies of two women whom an informant said had been killed, dismembered and buried after performing before Douglas' cameras. Douglas, an upholsterer from Costa Mesa, Calif., was arrested after two police undercover women agreed to act as "models." They drove with him to Yucca Valley but he was seized before any harm could come to them.

Lance called for more queries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate committee Friday decided to call Budget Director Bert Lance for more questioning about his personal finances, especially a $3.4 million personal loan he got from a Chicago bank. The Governmental Affairs Committee also put off a decison on Lance's request to be released from his promise to sell his 190,000-plus shares of stock in the National Bank of Georgia by the end of the year to avoid a big financial loss. Lance was president of the Atlanta bank. The panel asked him to appear Monday to discuss a $200,000 non-interest-bearing deposit the Georgia bank made in the First National Bank of Chicago last December, a month before Lance got a $3.4 million personal loan from the Chicago bank to finance his stock holdings.

Lance said in a statement released by his office he was "prepared to answer fully any questions" from the committee on Monday at a 10 a.m. meeting.

"He again expressed his belief that the has been candid and open in discussing his financial situation and said he will contunue to follow this policy," the statement said.

U.S. to sell Israel ships, copters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States will sell Israel $250 million worth of helicopters, hydrofoil ships and ammunition, the State Dept. said Friday, but has not approved an Israeli request to co-produce F16 fighters. Spokesman John Trattner said, "As part of the continuing military supply relationship with Israel, the government of the United States has agreed to approve a number of items, including helicopters, hydrofoil ships and conventional ammunition." "In addition," Trattner said, "the United States has also decided to approve a request for $107 million in financial support to help Israel support the local production of the Chariot tank." Trattner said the total increase in military sales was $250 million. Congressional approval will not be required for the arrangement, made during Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's visit to Washington this week.

The world

Sri Lanka's lead party falls in vote

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — The world's only woman head of government returned to parliament, but saw her socialist party collapse under a landslide of opposition to leftist politics in election results announced Friday. The Sri Lanka Broadcasting Corp. called the defeat of the government of Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike "an unprecedented landslide victory." Observers viewed the results of Thursday's national elections as a massive shift away from leftist politics. Socialists have dominated Sri Lankan politics since the mid 1960's. Mrs. Bandaranaike's Sri Lanka Freedom Party fell to a protest from an overwhelming majority of the 6.5 million who cast votes.

Gandhi charged with subversion

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Parliament passed a resolution today charging former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi with subverting democracy during her 21 months of emergency rule. The house passed the private resolution written by ruling Janata Party member Hari Vishnu Kamath by voice vote. It was preceded by heated debate from members of Mrs. Gandhi's opposition Congress party. The unofficial resolution charged Mrs. Gandhi and her "gang" with "subversion of democratic norms . . . during the dark days of tyranny and terror" following her declaration of a state of emergency. It marked the first time parliament has passed such a resolution rebuking a former prime minister.

Mom, 8 kids killed, house burned

PROSPECT, Conn. (UPI) — The bodies of a mother and eight children, some of them bound and gagged by a killer who set their home on fire, were found early Friday in the smouldering ruins of the house.

"There's no question in my mind they were murdered, possibly before the fire," said Edward P. Leonard, the state police commissioner.

"All the bodies were burned extensively," he said. "I believe it's the largest multiple homicide in the history of the state.

LEONARD SAID a number of leads were being checked out, "but no one's in custody."

He said the bodies of Mrs. Cheryl Beaudoin, 29, her seven children, ranging in age from 4 to 12, and a cousin who was spending the night with the friendly, close-knit family were found throughout the six-room home south of Waterbury.

The father, Fred Beaudoin, was at his factory job at the Pratt and Whitney Co. aerospace plant in North Haven when the fire was reported at 4:13 a.m. State police said he was notified at 5:30 a.m.

Leonard decined to comment on unofficial reports Mrs. Beaudoin and some of the children were shot before the fire was set. Because of the condition of the bodies, police were unable to say whether they had been shot or how many had been bound and gagged.

AUTOPSIES WERE ordered by the state's chief medical examiner, Dr. Elliott Gross, who pronounced the victims dead at the scene, a red clapboard house tucked away in a stand of pine trees in the community of 8,000.

State police identified the Beaudoin children as Fred Jr., 12; Sharon, 10; Debbie, 9; Paul, 8; Rod, 6; Holly, 5; Marylou 4. Also dead was their 6-year-old cousin, Jennifer Santoro.

Neighbors said they smelled smoke about 4 a.m. but thought at first it might be burning rubbish. Mrs. Joseph Paolino, who reported the fire to the state police at 4:13 a.m. said she saw an auto drive away from the home about the time she noticed the smoke but was unable to give a more detailed description.

Neighbors said Beaudoin was a stock car driver who spoke little and was seen rarely in the daytime because of his night job. The couple lived at the home 11 years and were well liked by neighbors.

The Beaudoin children were described as very popular in the neighborhood. "They were all good kids," a neighbor Frank Bainer said.

Some of the children may have been adopted or foster children but state police could not confirm it.

THE BODY of the mother of eight murdered children is carried away from the scene of the crime in Prospect, Conn. The bodies of the eight dead children remain in the house.

Final round of fighting fails to beat Rocky's spirit

The second round ended with Apollo assaulting Rocky with blinding combinations and delivering a stupendous right cross that flung Rocky into the ropes and shattered the unbroken nose.

"Man, I rearranged his face with that right. The people love what's happenin' tonight," Apollo said to his trainer.

"People nothin', you in a fight, my man. Ya best believe what you hear: Knock that boy out soon an' let's go home."

Apollo was right: he had rearranged Rocky's face, and in Rocky's corner Mickey and Benny were both working on it to try to reduce the swelling around his eyes. His nose was really shattered. Rocky was having a hard time trying to breathe.

"Ya nose is broke," Mickey observed sadly.

"Damn! How's it look?" Rocky asked.

"It's an improvement — Don't swallow the blood. Go for his ribs. Don't let 'im breathe." Mickey was upset about Rocky's broken nose, more than he let on: It was the beginning of the end.

"THE GUY'S GREAT," Rocky said in awe.

Really bugged by this remark, Mickey sassed rocky. "Why don't ya tell 'im you're a fan!"

Adrian stood at the rear of the arena and watched the battle. She was entranced by the power of it all; her heart beat faster and her blood pulsed.

Back in the ring, Rocky kept grinding ahead. He planted a thumping left over the champion's heart and Creed winced. Rocky was game, but losing.

"C'mon . . . Lemme cut ya!" yelled Apollo.

Rocky waded in, and Creed employed incredible footwork. He set himself and cut loose with a thunderbolt right cross to Rocky's broken nose. Blood sprayed from the wound, and red droplets dripped from his chin.

Rocky was staggered by a torrent of combinations. His eyes were closed, but Creed couldn't drop him. The bell rang. It had become a matter of survival — to last each round, to counter each brutal attack though bruised and bleeding.

The commentator barely could sit still: "Without a doubt, this is the most punishing brawl I have ever seen. The ringside audience is spotted with blood, they have had a transfusion of courage, they're polka-dotted with the signature of bravery: red, red, red is the color of their main event. This fight should have been stopped rounds ago, but Rocky Balboa refuses to fall . . . Is he hero or fool?"

ROUND 14 and Rocky bore in close. Apollo still had spring in his legs. Moving in bright and fast, he caught Rocky flush on the jaw. Rocky staggered; he was like a marathon dancer who had lost his partner 60 hours before, but still was leaning and moving as if there was someone there. Apollo cut loose with pure savagery. Rocky was driven against the ropes and received last rites in the form of a devastating beating from the champion . . . Rocky was dropped.

The referee was counting: " . . . six . . . seven . . . eight . . ." He got no further.

Insanely, Rocky got to his feet and tensed with renewed energy. He was a wounded, wild, animal. The tide suddenly turned and washed Rocky up on Apollo Creed. Rocky dropped low and caught Apollo with a pair of terrific body punches that seemed to drive Apollo's diaphragm up to his throat. A loud crack was heard. A glaze of pain covered Apollo's eyes with the jellied aspic of cruel reality.

Creed took the punishment like a stoic. He had picked the Italian stallion, and now that the horse was running wild, stampeding all over him, it was up to him to tame the wild beast or kill it in the name of sport. Blood ran from Apollo's mouth. He didn't like losing it — blood was personal. In the clinch he leaned over Rocky, and it dripped down the Italian's neck and shoulders like a mantle. Apollo shielded his wound from the ringside judges and continued to fight.

AT THE END of the round when the bell clanged and the red bulbs atop the ringposts lit up, Apollo's men rushed out and guided him to his corner.

" . . . Ribs broke. . . " Apollo managed to say. Blood was still trickling from his mouth. The trainer felt his ribs.

"Yo' bleedin' inside, man. Get that doctor!"

"One more round," Apollo said. "Only one more round to go. I won't die."

"Who says you won't. Don't kill yourself, man. Let the doctor stop the fight."

"Stop jivin'!" Apollo replied. "Yo' talkin' to the champ."

The trainer, knowing Apollo had made up his mind, gave him the best advice he could under the circumstances. "Cover the ribs . . . look here, elbow down tight . . . tight! Stand straight . . . you're the best, you're the best!"

"Thanks," Apollo replied.

Rocky's face had been beaten to jelly, but his mood was buoyant. He, too, had that special something that only good fighters have — a false sense of invincibility, a mistaken interpretation of life, deadened nerve endings, and a round-trip, one-time ticket to fame and fortune.

"HOW I LOOK out there, Mick?" he asked.

"Great, kid, great!" the worried Mickey replied. There was still a chance his man, Rocky, could go blind. Creed had been working on Rocky's mutilated eyes. It wasn't worth it; nothing was worth getting yourself a dog and a tin cup for.

"We gotta stop it, kid," Mickey said softly. "Ya gave it ya best shot!

"Nobody's gonna say ya didn't give ya' all. I can't let ya go out," Mickey declared.

Rocky stood and eyed them all. "I'll kill ya all. Don't stop nothin'," he hissed quietly.

The last round, and both were in pain. Apollo moved cautiously out of his corner and circled to Rocky's right.

Apollo feinted and Rocky fell for it. The champion unleased a lethal blow to the side of the head that jolted Rocky's mouthpiece into the second row. Rocky sagged against the ropes. The crowd, insane with joy, cried out as one and leaped to their feet: "He's hurt! He's hurt!"

Rocky's bloody teeth were exposed to Apollo in a snarl as he waved him to come ahead and fight toe to toe. Apollo obliged with a weary but effective burst of rights and lefts that had kayo written on every punch. Rocky countered the assault blow for blow.

ROCKY EXPLODED, "Gimme ya best!"

Mickey looked at the clock: ten seconds to go.

Even louder, Rocky shouted again, "Gimme ya' best!!"

Blood sprayed over the ropes and onto the ringside photographers. The fighters stood toe to toe and dragged every bit of strength from their souls. Hypnotized, they entered a dimension far beyond blood and pain. The minutes went by: six, five, four, three, two one! And the last bell stopped the action. The arena exploded with thunderous approval.

Balboa and Creed stood like blood-drenched gladiators on the most dramatic night of their lives. As though reacting to some unspoken command, they stepped toward one another and embraced. Apollo whispered in Rocky's ear. "Ain't gonna be no rematch."

The announcer continued: "Ladies and gentlemen, we have a split decision!"

Apollo didn't expect this, and tensed. His corner nervously tried to reassure him. It did no good.

Rocky didn't expect it either, and looked in confusion at Mickey, but Mickey was frozen in anticipation.

"Judge Walker scores it eight-seven, Creed. Judge Roseman scores it eight-seven, Balboa," continued the announcer.

APOLLO WAS RIGID. His eyes radiated fear. To lose the crown on this night, after the fight he fought, would really kill him. A silence blanketed the arena.

"Judge Connors scores it nine-six, Creed. Winner and still heavyweight champion of the world, Apollo Creed!"

Rocky stared across the ring at Apollo Creed, who stood victorious but physically broken. Once again the two men locked stares that spoke of the admiration they felt for each other.

Rocky also climbed out of the ring, pulling the blue velvet ropes apart like ribs that protect the heart; he was moving toward the beating, toward the muscle that made the whole place jump with excitement — the people. Waves of them, his fans, surged forward.

Fearful that Rocky was in danger, Adrian tried to move forward. Running headlong into the crowd, she angled through the mass to get to Rocky.

She could see Rocky in the distance, being borne toward her at the head of a procession. The procession approached and passed Adrian. She jumped to her toes and waved frantically to him, but he didn't see her.

She screamed Rocky's name but wasn't heard at first; then somehow the delicate voice lightly knifed through the racket and reached Rocky. He looked in all directions, unable to locate Adrian. Finally he managed to see her; she was jumping up and down and waving. He tried to lower himself, but the crowd wouldn't permit it. They were carrying him away.

IN DESPERATION, Rocky turned and began climbing across people's heads and shoulders. He resembled a man trying to go up a down escalator. People were jammed so tightly together that they made a solid floor of heads and shoulders, a flat and bumpy rug of hair. Rocky managed to crawl across them to Adrian.

Still suspended in air, Rocky leaned down, and Adrian jumped up: They locked in an embrace.

"I love you . . . I love you . . . I love you . . ." was all Adrian could say. It was all she had to say. It was all he wanted to hear.

THE BATTERED man-of-the-hour, Rocky leaves the ring with Adrian at his side. The fight's finished at last.

Rocky is a moving, uplifting story of hope. This is the last of a six-part story by Julia Sorel, based on the screenplay by Sylvester Stallone.

Charismatics could be 3rd schism

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Charismatic movement could either revolutionize the church or lead to schism on the scale of the Protestant Reformation, two theologians said Friday.

Charismatics, said the Rev. Michael Harper, an English Anglican and founder of the renewal group Fountain Trust, "must organize . . . but not to become another church. That is the danger.

"This could become the third Great Schism," Harper said, like the split between Rome and Constantinople 800 years ago that resulted in the formation of the Orthodox wing of Christianity and the Protestant Reformation 450 years ago.

THE WARNINGS CAME during the third day of the unprecedented Conference on Charismatic Renewal in the Christian Churches, which for the first time has brought together representatives of the classical charismatic groups, Roman Catholic charismatics and mainline Protestants.

While the theme of the meeting has been the drive toward unity among charismatics, Dr. Robert G. Tuttle Jr., said that deep revisions, especially around the issue of speaking in tongues, still remained.

Classical pentacostalism, said Tuttle, an assistant professor at Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, Calif., believes that speaking in tongues must be the "initial evidence" of baptism by the Holy Spirit, a spiritual baptism that flows from the believers conversion to Christ.

But the new charismatics, those found in the Roman Catholic and mainline Protestant churches since the outburst of the movement in the 1960s, do not necessarily believe that speaking in tongues is an essential sign of "Spirit baptism."

"As I understand the charismatic renewal, it cuts at the heart of classical Pentacostalism at all points," Tuttle said.

HE SAID LAST year he had traveled more than 150,000 miles speaking in United Methodist Churches on the renewal movement and found "80 per cent of them split right down the middle . . . and almost always on the issue of tongues.

"I'm not saying that the pentacostals are wrong and I am right," he said. "I'm just saying that we disagree.

"But," he added," we can't both be right. Theologically, if you are a classical pentacostal you should not be a United Methodist.

"Some new pentacostals have, almost by default, accepted a Pentacostal line," he said, "and that is where the problem is — they haven't had the training to interpret their gift in light of their traditions, so they're bringing one theology and placing it on top of another, and what happens? You split the church."

Followers of the charismatic movement believe in baptism of the Holy Spirit, with its special "gift of tongues" under which one so graced speaks in a seemingly nonsensical language described as "spiritual ecstasy."

Episcopalian prayer book doing well

David E. Anderson

World of religion

It's been almost a year since the tumultuous Minneapolis General Convention of the Episcopal Church which saw the church turned inside out with the ordination of women and first approval of the Proposed Book of Common Prayer.

The ordination of women to the priesthood issue was the headline grabber and still threatens the church with at least a minor schism.

But for many Episcopalians, a far more wrenching and far more difficult issue was the revision and modernization of the 1928 Book of Common Prayer.

AT THE TIME of the convention, there were dire predictions that the new book would never take hold in the pews and, if finally approved, would result in widespread ecclesiastical disobedience as parishes across the country would refuse to give up the beloved 1928 book.

But just the opposite seems to be happening.

Since January, reports Seabury Press, publisher of the new book, one million copies have been sold and it has gone to press to print a second edition of 150,000 pew copies of the book.

Officials at Seabury say that the people seem "ready and eager" for the new book and acceptance is growing as people become familiar with it.

"It is the right book for our time," according to the Rev. Charles Price of Virginia Theological Seminary and a member of the church's Standing Liturgical Commission.

PRICE IS PROBABLY the most important influence on the new book.

Much of the controversy over the book is over the grace of the language.

The Book of Common Prayer, first compiled in 1549 by Thomas Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury, has become a familiar part of English Literature, much as the King James version of the Bible and the phrasing and rhythm of the book seem indelibly imprinted on people's tongues.

But Price argues that the new book is comprehensive and ample, designed so that "the Episcopal Church in all its diversity will be able to use it.

"A given congregation may not like or use all the liturgical possibilities which this Book makes available," he says, "But there is room in the Book for most existing Anglican customs.."

SOME CONSERVATIVES, after experimenting with book, seem to agree.

The Rev. Hugh D. McCandless, writing in the independent but influential Episcopal organ, "The living Church," notes that "one can have the 1928 holy communion and morning prayer, pretty nearly unchanged, and with those changes not obvious, without breaking a single rubric (liturgical rules) . . . "

But much of the language is contemporary and not Elizabethan.

The test of whether the new book's use of "the language of the people" will survive over time remains to be seen.

But the first response seems to be positive and encouraging.

Time: 11:30 P.M.
Mabel: John, are you awake?
John: Naturally I'm awake. Who could sleep on this mattress?
Mabel: It's only six years old and they told us it should last 15 or 20 years.
John: They meant that's how much older we would get if we slept on it for six years.
Mabel: It was their best mattress. It is supposed to have over 800 coils in it.
John: I know — I can feel every one of them poking me in the side.
Mabel: We should go to the Schaumburg Mattress Factory. They make a beautiful mattress — it has the cutest shaped coils in it.
John: How do you know so much about them?
Mabel: I was there with Marge last month. She says their new mattress is fantastic. Why don't you go right now?
John: Are you crazy? It's almost midnight!
Mabel: Then where are you going?
John: I'm going to sleep on the sofa.
Mabel: Oh no you don't. You had the sofa last night. You can sleep on the floor tonight!

Winter Wheat

There's a noonday ritual you don't find around here much any more.

His mom packs a sandwich or two, piled high with meat, and a thermos full of lemonade to wash it down.

And she hauls it to her son.

It happens like clock work every noon — the combine stops for dinner in the field. This time the winter wheat can wait, for it'll be dark before supper when he stops again and goes back home.

He wouldn't have it any other way. You see, the land is his, and it's his boss. It tells him when to work and how long and finally it tells him how much he'll make this year.

So they can have their commuter trains, their vested suits, their martini lives.

For him, it's tan coveralls, a white hot sun and rain now and then.

Norm Utpodel, at age 21, is an old-fashioned farmer.

It's a small piece of land, 5-acres or so, at Palatine and Buffalo Grove roads. So far, with each year there has been a new harvest. And at least for one more season, it remains the choicest crop land in the center of the megalopolis.

Why don't you ask me something easy like how to cure the common cold?

City needs police force

The heartbreak suffered by the Gerald Schubring family in Prospect Heights can never be fully compensated. However, the case raises some serious issues that the city of Prospect Heights must deal with.

A group of 10 to 14-year-old youths broke into the Schubrings' home over the July 4 weekend while the family was on vacation. When they were finished with their "mischief," they left $20,000 worth of damage to the house and its contents.

Such senseless violence is inexplicable. A similar case occurred this week in Hanover Park, where a 5, 9 and 12-year-old did $13,000 damage to a house. In both cases, it will be up to the courts to work with the children and their parents to try to eliminate the cause of such crimes.

But the Schubring case also provides opportunity for Prospect Heights officials to examine two issues: the need for a parental responsibility ordinance dealing with vandalism and the possibility of creating a police force for the city.

The proposed parent responsibility ordinance, similar to those enacted by other area communities, has been in a city council committee for months. The ordinance would hold parents financially responsible for damage caused by their children.

Such an ordinance probably would have been little comfort to the Schubring case, principally because the amount of their damages exceed the limits in the ordinance. However, the over-all effect of such a law can help to discourage all sorts of vandalism by increasing parental supervision.

The need for a police department for Prospect Heights is a more complex issue. Since it incorporated last year, the city has contracted with the Cook County sheriff for protection. Under the contract, Prospect Heights has eight police officers assigned to it. One is on duty during the day and two at night in the city of 13,000.

By contrast, Buffalo Grove, a village with 20,000 persons, has a police force three times as large — 25 officers.

The present police situation in Prospect Heights means that police cannot handle more than one or two calls at a time. On busy nights, city residents have to wait.

In addition, such a small force of officers cannot provide the same level of general surveillance in the community as a larger force. And, while more police would not necessarily have meant the vandals in the Schubring case could have been caught in the act, watchful police can improve neighborhood security.

Prospect Heights officials did not form a police department immediately when the city incorporated, wisely waiting for the city's first tax receipts and signs that such a step was needed.

It is now time for Prospect Heights to look closely at the police question. Eventually the city must have its own force. Planning should begin now.

'Traveling Thompson's' many junkets

Gov. James R. Thompson's behavior during his months in office proves it is in everyone's interest that the state is reverting to four-year gubernatorial terms beginning next year.

Thompson's present two-year term is a result of the 1970 Illinois Constitution, which mandated that the governor and other state officers be elected in non-presidential years. Next year, following a two-year term, the offices will be back on a four year cycle.

And none too soon. Since his inauguration, Thompson has been on the road frequently. Last weekend, he made personal appearances at a county fair in Peoria and at the grand opening of an auto dealership in Melrose Park.

Thompson has spent so much time on the road, that some Springfield politicians have nicknamed him 'Traveling Thompson.'

Thompson has made campaign stops not only in Illinois, but throughout the country. Some wags suggest the former U.S. attorney is not only running for reelection in 1978, but in the 1980 presidential race, too.

Since April he has made business or political trips to Iowa, New Orleans, New York City and Washington D.C.

And although his wanderlust was curtailed during the end of the legislative session, he has resumed his travels with a flourish.

This past week Thompson was in Washington D.C. on business, discussing taxes and in Phoenix, Ariz., appearing before a legislative task force on organized crime. While in Phoenix, he was main speaker at a GOP fundraising dinner.

Today he will be airborne for San Francisco on a weekend pleasure trip.

Meanwhile, some major bills — including one involving the controversial drug Laetrile and another restricting public aid payments for abortions — are waiting for the governor's action.

Four-year terms will relieve incumbent governors from the pressure to begin campaigning the day they are sworn into office.

Does the Village of Palatine have the right to sell water outside its village limits after telling the residents of Palatine that there is a severe water shortage? Well, that is what the Palatine Planning Commission did at the meeting Tuesday. A developer for Apple Tree Estates on Plum Grove Road (this land is outside the village limits and cannot be annexed since they are not contiguous to the village) requested water for planned unit development townhouses and got it! The village will bring the water mains, at our cost, up to Illinois Road, from there the developer will bring it to his land.

As a homeowner and 25 year resident of Palatine, I question this seriously. Why should we, the taxpayers, pay for installation of water mains to outsiders? If there is a water shortage in this town, why do our board members believe they can give our water away?

In a village letter, Mr. Harwig, our village manager, wrote at length what we, the citizens of this town, should do to conserve water and how to punish people by raising the water rates or other means as discussed at the June Village Board meeting. Does the Palatine planning board believe that if we charge the same water rates to people out of the village that will increase our water supply? Who are they kidding? Water will dwindle faster with the larger population.

Trustee Payton made a statement that 27 units aren't going to put much strain on the village water supply. What does he mean? Twenty-seven units in all could have a population anywhere from 80 to 100 people, since we are talking of three bedrooms and two-and-a-half baths in each unit. Will the newcomers to the unincorporated area be understanding of our water shortage and will they be willing to live under the same restrictions imposed on the citizens of this town, or will they ignore the village rules. Will we then have to dispatch our desperately needed short handed village personnel into the area to educate them? I think not!

We elected and/or appointed our village citizens of this town. Giving needed water supplies into an unincorporated area is not protecting the twon people but flagrantly violating the trust we bestowed upon them at the last election.

Words of praise

Dave Ibata's story regarding "antique aircraft," which appeared in Leisure in The Herald of July 16 was most interesting. I hope more stories of a similar nature will be forthcoming. Surely there must be a goodly number who receive The Herald, and who spent considerable time around those planes in World War II, who found your story as interesting as I and would appreciate more.

Tax bill increases draw comment

When I received my 1976 real estate tax bill yesterday, my first thought was a computer error as the attached bill represents over $300 more than the 1975 tax bill.

After reading The Herald, it was obvious that a lot of tax bills either had computer errors or officials were serious about socking it to us.

We are (taxpayers) treated like babies. We are helpless but to pay. In this day and age of high cost of living and inflation, etc., we are expected to financially struggle along with day to day cost and then out of the clear blue have money available to pay an absorbent increase in real estate taxes.

I believe in Jesus, and I know that the Bible teaches that we are to give to Caesar what is Caesar's and give to God what is God's, but I feel what I am forced to give in additional taxes to Caesar isn't right.

Please consider the following.

1. Assuming that there are 20,000 homeowners in Arlington Heights, Wheeling Township would receive (based on an increase like mine — $300) an increase in revenue of $60,000,000. Where is it going to end?

2. Based on my new tax bill, approximately 50 cents out of every hour of my wages went to paying my real estate taxes.

3. Americans already work the first three hours a day just to pay their payroll withholdings.

4. In addition to the above we pay all the other burdensome taxes, on all consumer goods, etc., etc., etc.

WILL THE PEOPLE of Arlington Heights ever wake up? We have all been hit by great tax increases. Why? Referendum lethargy!

The library board decided that they need more space. A referendum is voted on. It passes — most of the voters in Arlington Heights stayed home; those for the additional space got out and voted "yes." Tax rates went up.

The Dist. 25 school board decides to increase their budget. A referendum is voted on. It passes — most voters stayed home. Those who wanted the increase got out and voted "yes." Again tax rates went up.

The park board decided that Arlington Heights needs more parks, equipment and a new golf course. A referendum is voted on. It passes. Most people stayed home — again the "yeas" voted. Tax rates went up.

We can't expect the store to run if we stay home. We have to get involved. Get out and vote, curb the spending powers of the various boards that govern Arlington Heights.

Andy Young's rival

Play it again, Carlos—for laughs

Paul Greenberg

The president of Venezuela has been enjoying a successful tour of the United States. He deserves a rousing reception, considering the quality of his material. For example: The president, Carlos Andres Perez, told the National Press Club that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, of which his nation is a member in good standing, "is neither a cartel nor a monopoly . . ."

The rest of the line should have been lost in laughter.

To take the Venezuelan president seriously, one would have to suppose that those oily prices just go up in concert 'cause of some crazy coincidence. As for those OPEC summits, where it is announced what the world price of oil will be after a given date, why, those must be just Wednesday night church meetings. OPEC ain't no cartel. And John D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil Company was just a Mom-and-Pop filling station. Tell us another one, Carlos.

WHEREUPON CARLOS will. OPEC, Perez explained, seeks only to give oil its "real value," the best euphemism yet for whatever the market will bring without utterly destroying it. At the moment, the kings and sheiks of the oildoms seem separated from the presidents and premiers only over how much they can gouge the industrialized world without its collapsing — as opposed to its only plunging into another deep recession, as it did when the price of oil quintupled earlier in the Seventies.

By oil's "real value," Perez must mean whatever an oil-thirsty world can pay for it, without any reference to the few centavos it actually takes to bring the stuff out of the ground in a country that, like Saudi Arabia, seems to be floating only a few feet above vast pools of the stuff.

Like some other concepts of justice, the "just price" seems to have been relegated to medieval scholarship.

Perez's method of setting a "real value" reminds one of the way some congressmen determine their own salaries — not by any claims of service rendered but by how much the taxpayers can be forced to cough up without openly rebelling. As Perez illustrates, it is a process not entirely confined to Norteamericanos.

THE VENEZUELAN president kept 'em laughing on his tour of the United State. In Chicago — which always has been a good town for slapstick — the visiting Venezuelan explained that the Panama Canal was "as much Panamanian as the Mississippi River is American."

Well, yes, in the sense that both were created by a greater power. But the similarities would seem to dwindle to a precious few after that. The Panama Canal is about as Panamanian as Teddy Roosevelt, George Washington Goethals and William Crawford Gorgas. Not to mention Philippe Bunau-Varilla, the magnificent wirepuller who put the whole deal together. He was French. The canal, like Panama itself, is largely a North American invention.

There would seem to be some disproportion in the latest Panamanian demand that the United States pay more than $5 billion while relinquishing rights of sovereignty over the canal. Usually the party handing over the item of value expects to collect, not pay. If anybody should be offered money in this deal, it ought to be the United States. If the Panamanians were to start the bidding at $5 billion, and if Washington then accepted, there would be no doubt that sovereign American rights were now for sale. Instead, the Panamanians want the United States to hand over the canal and $5 billion. Maybe Carlos Andres Perez could explain it.

Andy Young had better look to his laurels. The competition from down South America way is getting pretty stiff.

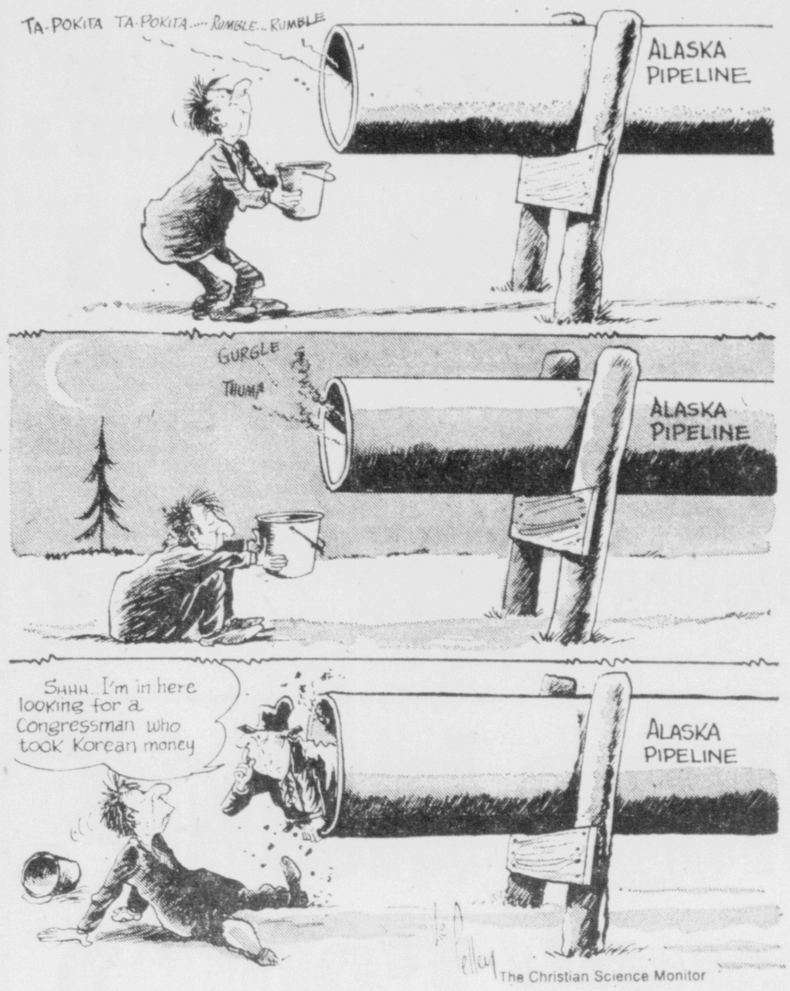
"Golly! Are you REALLY a 'profiteer from Plains, Georgia'?"



SBA progam cheats minorities

The hearing on the operations of the Small Business Administration's program to help minority businesses has disclosed a horror show of political boondoggling and incompetence.

When Chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., characterized the program as "a disaster which has cost the taxpayers $1.5 billion" there was only a muttered protest from the two officials from the Washington SBA office that "it wasn't all wasted."

From the files of SBA, Chiles reviewed dozens of little horror stories of the term in which wealthy white businessmen used poor blacks as fronts to milk the program of millions of dollars.

BUT MORE SHOCKING than any of the individual scandals was the attitude of the SBA officials who admitted that their own files had for years disclosed evidence of false and fraudulent representations of the financial status and participation of the blacks who had no managerial responsibilities and were frequently treated as janitors.

The long overdue investigation by Chiles and his government opeations subcommittee of federal spending practices also was an indictment of the Senate and House Small Business committees, whose members had permitted the corruption and mismanagement to fester and grow worse at least since 1971 and 1972.

Clark Mollenhoff

Watch on Washington

The SBA's minority assistance program has grown from eight contracts valued at $10 million in 1968 to the present 2,800 contracts valued at $400 million.

The program was enacted to help minority enterprises and minority businesses get started in the highly competitive business world. SBA monies are provided to help establish the operation, and minority firms are given preferential treatment in bidding for government contracts.

WHEN THE COMPANIES were formed, the SBA was to guarantee them enough government business, through non-competitive, contract set-aside programs, to help them gain the expertise to later compete on a professional basis with established firms.

If any reasonable standards had been estabished for qualification as "a disadvantaged minority citizen" the result might have been different, Chiles said. SBA officials tried to explain how a $36,000-a-year, college-educated White House staff member qualified in one SBA-approved project. It was one of a dozen equally ludicrous examples of SBA's "disadvantaged."

Another man with five successful businesses in operation used the SBA minority program to push still another business entity with the competitive advantage that assured a government-subsidized success.

Washington SBA officials blamed the situation on the regional officials who were given nearly absolute discretion in the approval or disapproval of applications under the minority business development program.

WINFORD SMITH, director of the office of business development, and his deputy, William Stephens, protested that they could not order or direct a regional SBA head to do anything.

Chiles asked if the administrator of the SBA was powerless to move against the regional heads, and Smith and Stephens acknowledged that the administrator could have directed correction of many of the problems.

'The SBA has either got to clean up its shop or it's going to cause the death of what was designed to be one program to help – not cheat – minorities . . .'

''The Small Business Administration,'' Chiles declared, ''has either got to clean up its shop or it's going to cause the death of what was designed to be one program to help — not cheat — minorities . . .

''It must not be used, as it has been in the past, to further benefit persons who are not disadvantaged now and never were disadvantaged in the first place,'' Chiles said.

Cancel the garage sale or freeze the green beans?

Dorothy Meyer

If all the "how to keep cool" tips I have read this week were laid end to end they'd probably reach to the moon which is, as everyone knows, the favorite "if laid end-to-end" place of all statisticians.

And if Neil Armstrong had gone there this week instead of eight years ago he'd probably have said, "Keeeeripes, it's hot," instead of, "It's one small step for a man . . ."

Furthermore, if Neil had gone to the moon this week I would have sent a lot of green beans with him because my bean patch is going nuts in this heat but I don't have time to do anything with them because of my garage sale.

AND THEN NEIL would have said, "NASA, NASA, come in NASA — the moon is made of green beans."

It is indeed unfortunate that my beans and my garage sale have collided, but I couldn't help it. The office air conditioner blew a gasket Wednesday morning and by the end of the day I was so groggy that I placed an ad reading, "GARAGE SALE — Saturday."

That's today.

And I'm not ready.

But my beans are.

THE ONES I picked Wednesday are ready to be frozen and the ones I didn't pick Thursday or Friday are going to be ready for retirement by Sunday.

Of course, there's nothing I'd rather do today than freeze my beans. "Freeze" is such a lovely word this month and it — the word as well as the action — is definitely at the top of my personal "how to keep cool" list.

However, if I renege on my advertised garage sale to enjoy a bean freeze there will be a riot in front of my house this morning because hell hath no fury like a frustrated junker — especially a hot and humid frustrated junker.

Heat waves cause people's nerves to get ratchety and after the past two weeks you can understand why there's so many uprisings and revolts in the tropical countries. By the end of the day that the air conditioner broke down, everyone in the office was so revolting that nobody wanted to be downwind of anybody else.

WELL, I CAN'T sit around here babbling about my bean crop and the heat, I have a garage sale to go to. But I can't help but think back to that historic moon walk. Before the return trip and in order to lighten the load for the ascent stage, Armstrong and "Buzz" Aldrin jettisoned stuff valued in excess of $1 million.

What I couldn't do with THAT today!

However, I'll have to be satisfied with what I have and here I come, ready or not.

Anybody want to buy a lot of middle-aged beans?

The B1 may have been shot down, but don't count it out by GODFREY SPERLING JR.

Has the United States seen the last of a newly developed penetrating manned bomber?

This was one implication being drawn from President Carter's dropping of the B-1.

But a White House aide says there might well be another such bomber, to replace the B-52 when it reaches the very outer edges of its usefulness in the late 1980s.

AND FROM THE Pentagon comes information this is possible, but, at this point, "very iffy."

One Pentagon source, pointing out that the usual time involved between blueprint and deployment of a new bomber is about 10 years, says, "There's nothing on the drawing boards now, and no information as to whether there will be any research and development toward that end."

But another Pentagon source says an entirely new bomber could result from a "spin-off" from the continuing research and development that is expected to go on for the B-1.

THREE B-1s had been produced (and a fourth was near completion) when Carter announced he would not go ahead with that type of bomber. However, these can be used to research another completely new manned bomber — "the plane that would be so advanced that it would take us into the next century," as a source describes it.

"But," he adds, "we don't know how much in the way of appropriations we are going to be able to get for further research on the B-1."

There is considerable support in Congress for continuing research aimed at developing a later manned bomber, or at least, for research that would put the U.S. in the position to move toward such a plane if the need is discerned.

There is considerable research aimed at developing a later manned bomber . . .

"SAY THERE IS a sudden and completely unexpected defensive breakthrough on the part of the Soviets," one Pentagon informant said. "Perhaps it would be a breakthrough in anti-submarine warfare or some new very effective device that could blunt the effectiveness of our cruise weapon. Then we might well have to resurrect the manned bomber."

Under such circumstances, one Pentagon source indicated, the U.S. might decide to bring back the B-1 instead of moving to a completely new plane.

How long would that take?

"IF GOOD RESEARCH and development of the B-1 continues we might be in a position to have that plane ready for full use in five years. Otherwise, it might take longer," this source says.

The White House encouragement for the idea that there might be another manned bomber — and that Carter has very much kept this option open — was given guardedly.

But it seems to indicate speculation that the day of the manned bomber now was over is premature and, perhaps, incorrect.

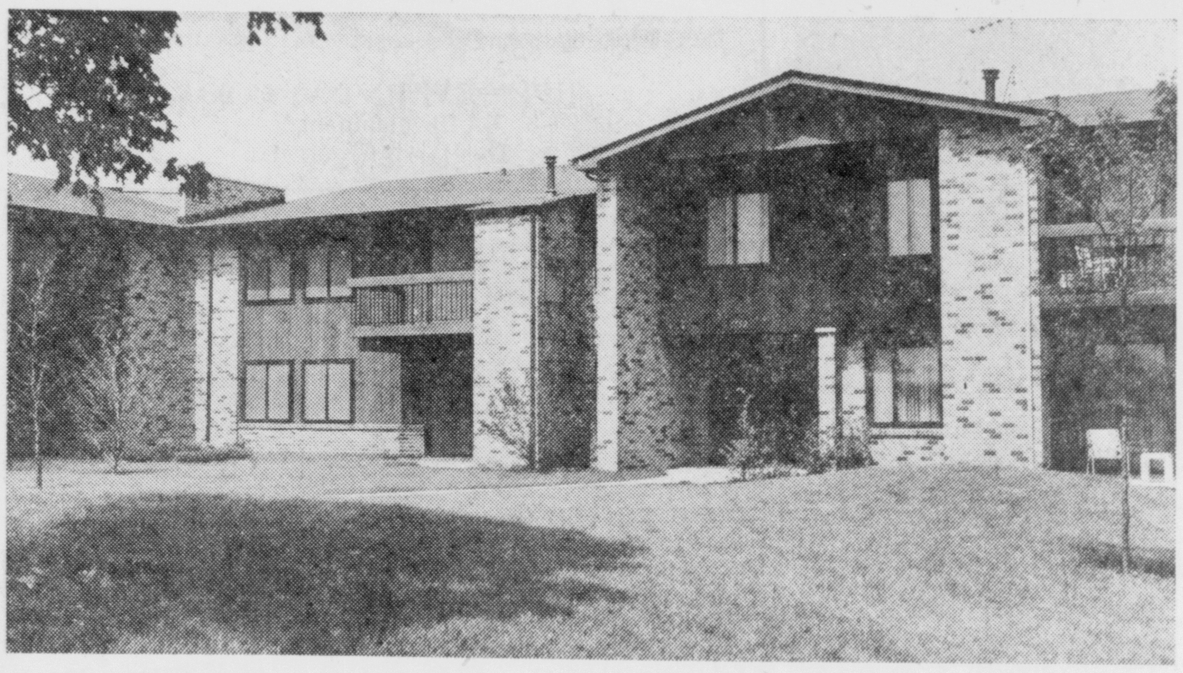
Kids gone, couples want small home



CONDOMINIUMS GIVE couples the advantage of home ownership with less care when they want to cut down on the work, once their children have grown and left home. One Realtor estimates half the couples looking for a smaller place choose either condos or townhouses.

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

After their children are grown and off on their Northwest suburban parents know exactly what they want. Less work. More fun!

Some are applying this thinking to housing.

While some older folks keep up the family home or move into apartments, increasing numbers are buying smaller, easier-to-care-for living quarters. They now have the time and prefer to use it to do what they want to do . . . while still own their own property.

"Condos and townhouses are attracting people who have raised their children, and are tired of taking care of houses and yards," explained Beverly Ann Berry, manager and vice president at Quinlan and Tyson, Palatine.

And many of these people are asking for places with tennis courts, swimming pools, golf rights and organized activities. They want to live among their own age group and with those who have similar interests. "Like attracts like," suggested Mrs. Berry.

ABOUT HALF of those looking for smaller places to live choose townhouses and condominiums, the other half, small ranch houses, according to Bob Christian, broker-salesman at Christian and Langos, Mount Prospect.

The majority want two bedrooms, one-and-a-half baths, well-equipped kitchen, fireplace and full basement. About 60 to 70 per cent choose a finished basement, Christian estimated.

Making the move to scaled-down residences, retirees want everything set: no repairs, no decorating to do.

To keep home chores at a minimum, older buyers may select a small ranch house and yard in a quiet, neighborhood with nearby shopping. Train service no longer concerns them, said Christian.

Whether they buy townhouses, condominiums or ranch houses, most want at least two bedrooms and more than one bathroom, agreed Clifford Lair, manager at Kole Real Estate, Arlington Heights.

People are used to more than one bathroom, he said, and theyneed that extra bedroom for guests.

THE BUYER LOOKING for something smaller in the Northwest suburbs can pretty well suit his pocketbook.

Condos and townhouses may offer more for one's money in Mrs. Berry's opinion.

The cheapest two-bedroom house costs $50,000, she said. For that price a buyer can get a condo with two bedrooms, two full baths, living and dining rooms and kitchen.

Extra benefits include a swimming pool, tennis courts, convenient parking and laundry facilities. Owners can join in organized activities and homeowners organization. Maintenance is a thing of the past . . . for a fee.

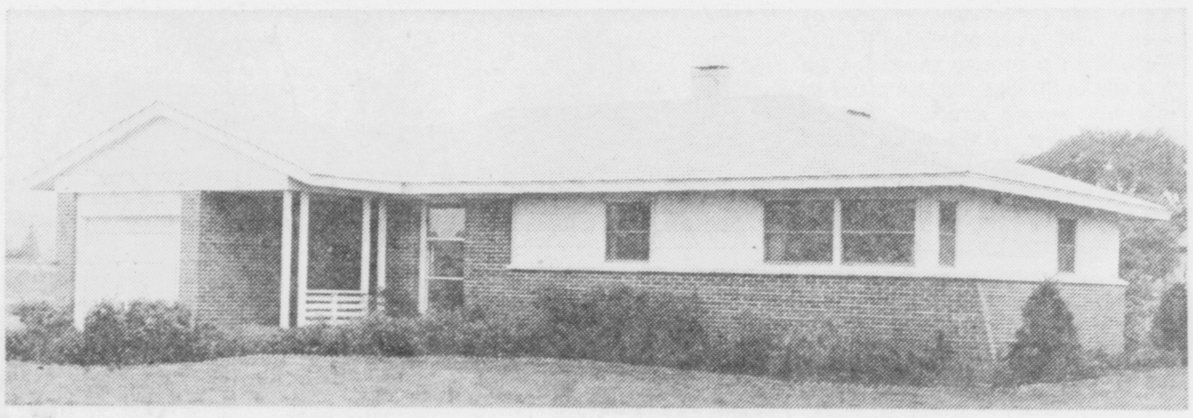
Other condos and townhouses are for sale throughout the Northwest suburbs starting from about $35,900 and going up to $85,000 for those with middle to upper incomes.

Some people buy more than one condo in different parts of the country, said Mrs. Berry. They move with the seasons, or when the mood strikes them.

OTHERS OWN summer homes in nearby Wisconsin and/or buy condos or townhouses in a warm climate for winter vacations while holding on to "the big house" she said.

They don't want to part with the family home with its good location, fond memories, friends and neighbors they like and other conveniences. Too, there's always plenty of space when grown children come visiting with the grandchildren or their friends. And those who purchased a good-sized house in a stable neighborhood about 20 years ago know they can't come anywhere near replacing it for what they paid originally.

As one homeowner puts it, "As long as we are able to keep it up, there's no better living for us, and none cheaper for what we have!"



MANY COUPLES SEEKING smaller quarters still want an individual house and the ranch style is a popular choice. Two bedrooms is the minimum and the majority also want a bath and a half.

Dry wall may be answer to grade change

George Creed

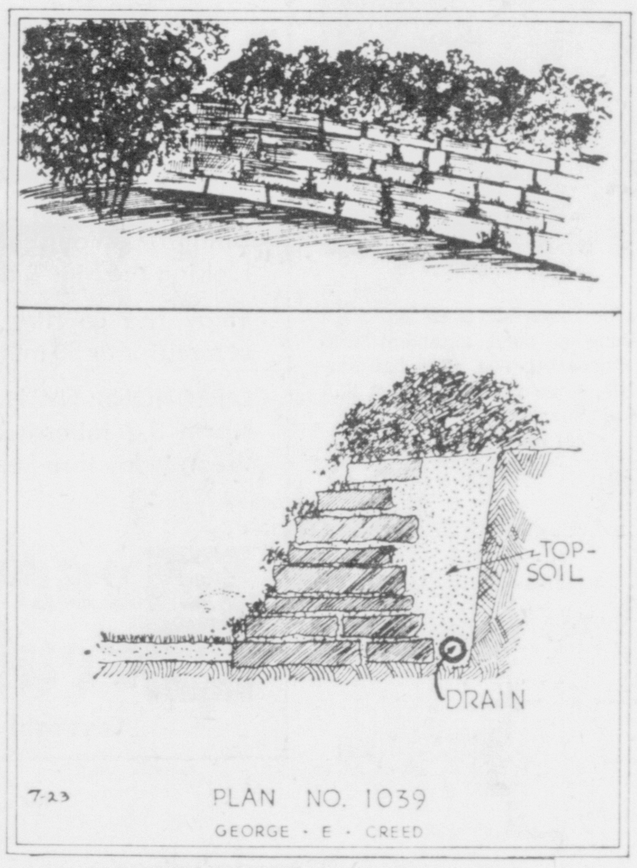
It's your landscape

A dry wall is not the answer to all problems where a wall is needed. Where slopes to be retained are steep and the soil is unstable a dry wall will not suffice and the services of an engineer should be sought. Amateur attempts to build a wall to retain a slope of this kind can end in expenditure of money and effort without satisfactory results.

But if you have an abrupt change in grade (up to 5 feet or so) on your property and the land on the upper level is gently sloping and stable, a dry wall could serve you very well.

Dry walls are simple to construct, but they do take hard work and muscle.

THOUGH YOU CAN build walls of this kind with stone or almost any shape, flat, or relatively flat stones like those shown, are the easiest to put in place. You can, of course, build a dry wall using cut stone, but this can be expensive unless you are able to obtain used sidewalk slabs.



The top sketch shows a completed dry wall while the bottom one illustrates how stones are laid in a dry wall with the larger and heavier stones laid as a base and smaller ones in the upper part of the wall. After the bottom stones are put in place a drain line, usually 4 inch, consisting of open joint tile or bituminous perforated pipe is installed as shown. Topsoil, as shown, is built up as the wall goes up and is also used as filler between stones. This soil allows for an easy growth of plants in the crevices and pockets between the layers of stone. Notice that as each stone is placed it is set back from the face of the stone below it. This set-back increases the stability of the wall.

AFTER COMPLETING your wall there are many ways of planting it to make it attractive. Planting shrubs at the top of the wall so that their branches will trail over the wall is one way of doing it. Planting in the cracks and crevices is another and there are many plants that adapt well in such locations.

Q. I planted a redbud tree last fall. This past spring it had very few flowers. Why?

A. Redbuds often do not flower well the first growing season after transplanting. Your tree should bloom well next year.

Q. Are the seeds of the castorbean plant poisonous?

A. Yes.

Pests are worst in July, August

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

Have you got "animal maggotism"? If four-legged, six-legged, eight-legged or 100-legged interlopers are strolling through your garden, congratulations, you've got it!

Some of the garden creeps that hang around to eat your veggies during July and August (the starring pest months in the garden calendar of events) are not only ugly and annoying: they are downright sneaky. Take the cutworm, for instance. (You can have it, I don't want it!!) Cutworms are thieves in the night that bite off leaves at ground level just to be nasty. They play Jack the Ripperoff with your tomatoes, cauliflower, cabbage plants and others. Especially active all over the Midwest this year, these fat, repulsive-looking curled-up creatures go one-quarter to one inch long in size. Look for dingy-gray, blackish worms with a flashlight at night to find this nocturnal feeder.

THERE ARE several things you can do to rid your garden of cutworms. Rob your husband's toolbox and "plant" some good, hefty nails, one nail per plant, as close to the stem as you can. When the cutworm attacks the stem, he usually encircles it, and the nail prevents this. Or you might try sinking tin cans or cardboard collars two inches below and above the stems of the plants. If impractical due to a large-size garden, you might have to resort to using insecticides.

Sevin, recommended by county agents, is available in easy-to-use pellets containing five per cent active insecticide. Cutworms are attracted to the inert bait ingredients. Sevin is one of the less noxious pesticides, but be sure to keep in mind that all pesticides can be harmful if misused. Read the label carefully and use only as directed.

I "LENT" my mother-in-law my apple tree for a few years until I could give it a permanent home. When I went to visit it last week, it had coddling moths. No reason to coddle these moths. Get their larvae (apple worms) and nip them in the bud before they make junk apples out of your tree.

The yearly toll of all bac yard-grown apples to this brown-terpillar is 20 to 95 per cent, if left unsprayed. Try Dipel, a naturally-2occurring bacterium (not a poison spray), which also is effective against inchworms, cabbage loopers, hornworms and other leaf-eating worms and non-toxic to humans, birds, bees, beneficial insects and other wildlife.

Tack Trap, a sticky, colorless material containing no toxic ingredients is effective against flying insects, especially white flies — those wedge-shaped insects that fly like snowflakes or dandruff when disturbed. Tack Trap, if not available locally, can be ordered from Animal Repellents, Box 999, Griffin, Ga. 30223. By the way. Tack Trap also repels rabbits — what rabbit wants sticky fur?

THE STATE OF Oregon is launching a campaign to keep out the destructive Japanese beetle — but aren't we lucky, this uninvited visitor from the Orient found Chicago decades ago. These infamous shiny metallic green, ugly beetles have copper brown outer wings and eat flowers, fruit, vegetables, turf, nothing is too good for them. They munch leaf tissue so that leaves resemble fine lace. A good, environmentally safe control is Doom, available from the Fairfax Biological Lab, Clinton Corners, N.Y., if you can't get it at your local garden center.

I think the only thing amusing about some of the bugs that plague us is their names. So I'm collecting names instead of bugs this summer. In the interests of pollsters, let's find the ugliest bug in the garden. If you have an unfavorite, send me the name of the bug or a description or picture of it in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. (Don't send me the bug — I open the morning mail at the breakfast table.)

METALLIC GREEN Japanese beetle feasts on just about anything in your garden. It is one of many pests to watch now.

English Tudor design cost conscious

The exterior view of this stately home, with its adzed half timber and stone, portrays financial success. By design, the porch extension on the right and the two-car garage on the left add to the size and interest of an otherwise square structure. Yet the square footage of the home is cost conscious. The less than 1,000 square feet on each floor should allow ownership by more than just the affluent.

The 6-foot-wide double front entrance doors are located under a garage roof extension for weather protection and are set into the stone wall. Access door to the garage is just to the left.

Inside, a 7 by 13-foot foyer-hall contains the turned staircase to the second floor and direct access to the rear kitchen. A wide arch opens to the 21-foot living room at the end of which is a log-burning fireplace. A 10-foot wide bay window and seat grace the front wall. The rear dining room adjoins and has outlets to one of the two porches. Screening and a built-in barbecue enhance the livability of the porch.

THE KITCHEN, with its large breakfast area, has an adjoining lavatory, access to the full basement and a built-in cleaning equipment closet.

Across a short hallway from the kitchen is the family room, from whch one can reach a second porch through double doors, permitting a free traffic flow for indoor-outdoor living. Service to this room and the porch from the kitchen is excellent. An interior door from the family room allows easy access to the garage.

The second floor has three bedrooms and two baths. One bath has a large stall shower and is private for the master bedroom use. The other two bedrooms share the second bathroom. All three rooms have good closet space and there is a spacious linen cupboard in the hall.

AN INTERESTING and useful added attraction for the master bedroom is a railed sundeck situated above the first floor porch. Because of its privacy, it offers both night or day use by the owners.

Exterior materials used are slate roof shingles, steel casement windows, stucco between wood half-timber walls, stone veneer on front and bottom of chimney.

Ward's tests project to cut energy use

Montgomery Ward is testing a free in-store project to help its customers reduce their energy usage.

Participating customers fill out four sheets of multiple choice questions accompanied by illustrations of varying types of doors and windows.

Questions include the approximate age of the house, its type (one-, two or three-or-more stories, or split level), approximate total square footage, details of floor coverings, rattling windows, type of air conditioning and total expenses for heating, cooling and other utilities during the past 12 months.

The inofrmation is graded by computer. Then, the Ward's energy counseling office prepares an individualized energy saving plan for the customer.

PATTERN, PATTERN, everywhere, but not too much to please. From window shade to tablecloth, Lloyd's "Lillian" floral paper and fabric coordinate the space.

Floral always pleasing

Pattern has its place

Carolyn Murray

Your home

It's been something of a relief to see the "pattern-on-pattern" look sink slowly into the sunset. There was a busy-ness about all that mixing of pattern. The result somehow lacked the kind of tranquility most of us require in a home setting.

But pattern does have a place in our decorative lives. The surprise of a sprightly floral bouquet always perks the visual appetite. And that surprise can be delivered through printed fabrics and wall-coverings as well as through a basket of fresh flowers.

The effect is well represented in today's illustration. For this townhouse dining room, designer Abbey Darer, ASID, opted for a delicious, one-pattern look. On the walls she used Lloyd's "Lillian" patterned paper. It's sprinkled with nosegays of field flowers in an overall print that's easy to live with.

THE MATCHING fabric has been cut and shaped to create a table cover, it's been used to upholster the chair seats and backs, to form shirred tieback curtains and even to cover the window shades.

That last required a little trick. Abbey used Joanna's "Lam-Eze" bonding material, an easy, do-it-yourself product that allows anyone to adhere fabric to a shade. Made by Joanna Western Mills, it stretches our decorating possibilities by encouraging that custom look in window treatments we all admire in the department stores and fine furniture stores.

To keep room from being overwhelmed by the delicate print, the designer chose a bold lime-green carpeting by Bigelow and dining chairs with white lacquer frames by Flair. The plant gallery, laden with ferns, adds appropriate real greenery to enhance the printed bouquets.

THE CEILING IS a nice surprise. It's been painted a sky blue, then framed with white molding. The old mantel for the fireplace was removed and a classic white one put in its place.

Often for dinner parties the floral tablecover is removed, revealing a glass-top table. The settings feature green-rimmed service plates, topped with flower-embellished white china plates or soup bowls. The flatware alternates between sterling or porcelain-handled stainless. No floral arrangements are used, just a trio of fat candles in three colors and at three heights. The table reflections make it seem like much more.

Window shades are generally kept at half-mast or three-quarter level, since the dining room is on the street side of the townhouse. On cool nights, the fire may be lighted, but always kept down in volume, since a raging fire quickly overwhelms the guests.

Forget your diet and feast on ice cream

The Junior Woman's Club of Des Plaines has launched a membership drive and invites all women interested in joining to attend several summer events.

The first affair is an old-fashioned ice cream social to be held next Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at 395 Lawn Ln., Des Plaines. Ice cream and different toppings will be provided on a do-it-yourself basis and the Juniors are calling it a "Forget Your Diet" night.

A husbands' night is planned for Saturday, Aug. 20, when prospective members and husbands or guests will have an opportunity to meet board members and their husbands.

The membership drive will be climaxed by the traditional fall kick-off on Thursday, Sept. 8.

THE JUNIOR WOMAN'S Club of Des Plaines made donations last year to brain research, juvenile diabetes, Reye's Syndrome, cancer research, Northwestern Suburban Day Care Center and Des Plaines paramedics.

The Juniors were instrumental in organizing the recycling center in Des Plaines and founded the Des Plaines Historical Society. They continue to provide volunteers for the Well Baby and Dental Clinics monthly and are currently involved in the Neighborhood Hands Up program with the Des Plaines Police Department to combat neighborhood crime.

Area women who want to become involved in the community and make new friends are invited to all of the summer events.

For more information regarding the club or upcoming events they may call Mrs. Offerle, membership chairman, 298-8910.

Behavior keyed as reason for women's long lifespan

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

Why do women live longer than men?

Some scientists believe it's in the genes. That is, the code of life present at birth sets men up for a shorter lifespan. It programs women for a longer one.

But the evidence for this theory isn't as strong as commonly has been believed, says Dr. Ingrid Waldron, of Philadelphia, Pa.

The associate professor of biology from the University of Pennsylvania sees lifestyle emerging as a key determinant of longevity. Genes matter. But behavior may matter at least as much, she figures.

In a report published by the "Journal of Human Stress," Dr. Waldron puts scientific pieces into place supporting that view.

THERE'S LOTS of evidence that men smoke more than women, and tend to drink harder, take more chances, are more aggressive than women. And those lifestyle factors may make the big difference in male versus female lifespans.

"In the contemporary United States, mortality is 60 per cent higher for males than for females," Dr. Waldron says. "Forty per cent of the excess of male mortality is due to arteriosclerotic heart disease, which is more common among men, in part, because they smoke cigarets more than women do. Also because, apparently, they more often develop the competitive, aggressive 'Coronary Prone Behavior Pattern.' Men who don't develop this behavior pattern may have as low a risk of coronary heart disease as comparable to women."

Dr. Waldron cites evidence showing one-third of the sex differential in mortality is due to men's higher rates of suicide, fatal motor vehicle and other accidents, cirrhosis of the liver and respiratory cancers and emphysema.

"Each of these causes of death is linked to behaviors which are encouraged or accepted more in males than in females: using guns, drinking alcohol, smoking, working at hazardous jobs, and seeming to be fearless," she said. "Thus, the behaviors expected of males make a major contribution to their elevated mortality."

Some social scientists have a hunch that in a generation or two liberated American females, expected by society to be aggressive and competitive, may also have shortened lifespans.

The facts on differences in mortality at present go like this:

- In 1920, the life expectancy for women was 56, only two years longer than for men. Life was less hectic for everyone in that era — compared to contemporary times. People also were less sedentary and walked more. There was no television to plop in front of for hours. Cars were luxuries for the rich.
- By 1970, women's life expectancy was 75, almost eight years longer than men's. Both women and men were more sedentary. Nearly everyone had wheels.
- In 1920, male death rates were no more than 30 per cent higher than female death rates at any age. By 1970, male death rates exceeded female death rates by as much as 180 per cent for 15 to 24 year olds and 110 per cent for 55 to 64 year olds.
- Among young adults the excess of mortality for males is due primarily to accidents. At older ages, heart, blood vessel and kidney diseases make the largest contribution to higher mortality among men. Rising male mortality from these causes and from lung cancer has been a major component of the increase in the sex differential in mortality.

"These trends were due in part to the sizable increase in cigaret smoking by men during the first third of the twentieth century." Dr. Waldron said.

"Another substantial component of the increase in the sex differential in mortality has been the decline in maternal mortality and uterine cancer due to improvements in medical care," she said. "Such data suggests a wide variety of cultural factors, including automobile use, cigaret smoking and health care, contributes to the contemporary sex differential in mortality."

Dr. Waldron said international comparisons produce further proof of the importance of cultural factors. In many countries, for example, it has been found that female death rates at ages between one and 40 exceed those of males.

"In some cases," Dr. Waldron said, "The males outlive the females at older ages as well. Interestingly, higher mortality among females has been observed most frequently in nonindustrial countries."

In America, a male's marital status also has something to do with how long he lives.

"THE EXCESS OF male mortality (over that of females) is lowest among married men," Dr. Waldron said. "It is 10 per cent higher among single and widowed adults. It is 50 per cent greater among divorced adults. The excess of mortality for males who are not married is particularly large for causes like cirrhosis of the liver which are strongly influenced by behavior, and for diseases like tuberculosis in which health habits and care play an important role."

Paid jobs and aggressive, competitive roles apparently contribute importantly to the higher rates of coronary heart disease in American males, many studies show.

Women, by contrast, have tended to have a greater orientation toward family and fill less competitive and more supportive roles. They haven't been under the same kind of stress as the men who go to work.

Several studies show that the risk of coronary heart disease is higher among men who have worked many hours overtime or who have held two jobs simultaneously. The Coronary Prone Behavior Pattern is exhibited by persons who are work-oriented, ambitious, aggressive, competitive, hurried, impatient and preoccupied with deadlines.

"LARGE PROSPECTIVE studies have shown that men who display this Coronary Prone Behavior Pattern are twice as likely as other men to develop or die of coronary heart disease," Dr. Waldron said. "Smaller retrospective studies, however, also have established that women who have coronary heart disease are more likely to display the Coronary Prone Behavior Pattern than other women."

She believes this shows that behavior patterns may make a larger contribution to risk of coronary heart disease than does the sex of the person.

The Coronary Prone Behavior Pattern is called Type A. The opposite behavior is known as Type B. Dr. Waldron said it is striking to note that Type B men, those with a less competitive and less rushed lifestyle, are just as likely to avoid coronary heart disease as comparable women. At older ages, the Type A men and the Type A women had the same high prevalence of coronary heart disease.

"The data suggests that men have more coronary heart disease than women in part because the Type A, Coronary Prone Behavior Pattern, is more prevalent among men," Dr. Waldron said.

Lawrence E. Lamb

The doctor says

Impotence may be a mental problem

I am planning on getting married in the near future to my ex-wife for the second time. Since our divorce five years ago we have had wonderful sex relations occasionally. About two months ago I became unable to have sex relations from the physical standpoint. I am only 38 years old and in good health. I drink a little more than average but not to the extent of being alcoholic.

I don't think this is a mental problem because of all the good sex relations in the past. I would like to know what reasons there are for this happening and what I can do about it if anything. I would like to cure this problem before getting remarried.

The chances are that it is psychological. The fact that you had good sex relations in the past does not rule that out. I interpret from your letter that you have had persistent impotence.

If it is a temporary failure on one or more occasions but not regular, then you might wonder if you had had too much to drink that time. As Shakespeare said, alcohol provokes the desire and takes away the ability. If it is persistent as you approach your marriage, I would suggest that you and your wife see a marriage counselor before the wedding. If you had a divorce, it must have been for a reason. There is usually some hostility associated with such procedures, or at the least, rejection. I would hazard a guess that at some level in your psyche these old problems are recurring and are the real problem.

Of course, you should have a complete physical examination, including tests for diabetes, to be certain you do not have a medical disorder that can cause impotence.

Whenever there is a basic emotional problem between two people it is often manifested in the bedroom as well. Your symptom of impotence may be telling you something.

To give you more information on impotence and the psychological factors involved I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-12, Impotence. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Incidentally, if you have normal erections at any other times for any reason you can be even more certain that the problem in your case is psychological.

I am a 17-year-old male and wash my hair every night. I have heard from so may people that if I keep this up I will lose a lot of my hair at an early age. I use the milder baby shampoos. Will washing my hair every night (especially since I have pretty oily hair) be bad for it?

Not nearly as bad as not removing that excess oil. The oil is sebum which is particularly irritating to the skin. It can cause a scaly condition known as seborrheic dermatitis. In uncontrolled cases it can cause lesions in the eyebrows, over the shoulders and even over the rest of the body. If you do have very oily hair, you are doing the right thing. You should use only one application of shampoo instead of two as many products suggest.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.

Fool house thieves with timer on radio

Dear Roberta: Friends told me that burglars — the real pros — are on to the trick of having lights visible from the street controlled by a timing devise when we are out or away on vacations. Local police advised of another helper: get another timer to attach to an electric radio, set the tuner to a 24-hour news or music station, and the volume to very loud.—Evelyn Koontz.

Dear Roberta: Take advantage of the economical and delectable produce at a good pick-your-own orchard. The whole family can get into the act. Together we picked over 20 pounds of green beans in under 45 minutes the other day. Here's how I blanch them for freezing: Wash, snip off the ends and then snap the beans. In a blancher bring water to a rolling boil. Insert the strainer filled one-quarter to one-third full of beans and cover. Begin timing when water returns to full boil and leave beans in for two minutes. Remove and immediately plunge them into ice water, leaving until cool or about five minutes. Drain thoroughly, pack loosely in plastic bags, tie tightly and freeze. You'll have "fresh-picked" beans in the middle of winter. — Jan Dudas.

Dear Roberta: My preteen daughter's compulsive doodling on every loose paper she found was no problem until she began to decorate whatever was near the phones. Usually, there were my notes, mail, etc. The solution? Next to each phone now is one of those new and engaging adult coloring books with complex geometrical designs, with a package of felt-tipped pens. From time to time, we all pick up a marker and add a curlicue or two. — Margaret Burns.

Dear Roberta: My investment in metal wall-mounted lamps over the beds is a flop. Even with soft-white, low-watt bulbs, they produce too strong a glare. If you've got any remedy, I'd appreciate it. — Mrs. Peter V. Small.

I do, if your sockets are porcelain and if you're willing to pay handsomely. You'll get a spotlight effect with 30-or 50-watt "reflector bulbs" found in lamp or electrical supply stores. These last many times longer than regular bulbs. But don't take a chance with these if your sockets are plastic. In that case, visit your lamp store to see the various bulbs new on the market.

Dear Roberta: After decades of struggling to carry fancy insultated ice chests across beaches and picnic grounds, I'm amazed to learn that those inexpensive plastic foam versions are just as good at keeping foods cold (with ice or freeze devices; and so much easier to handle. — Rose Danziger.

(Mrs. Mathews welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to Roberta Matthews, in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publicatcons, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence R. Smeltzer

Weddings

Janet Scheunemann–Lawrence R. Smeltzer

Yellow and white was the color scheme chosen by Janet Laura Scheunemann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Scheunemann of Rolling Meadows, for her wedding to Lawrence Robert Smeltzer of Rockford. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Preston Smeltzer of Lewistown, Mont.

The double ring ceremony took place June 25 at 1 p.m. in St. Colette Catholic Church, Rolling Meadows. Janet wore a candlelight satin gown with bodice, sleeves and hem of lace. Lace covered her headpiece and edged her chapel-length veil. Her bouquet held candlelight roses, baby's breath and ivy.

Eileen Gentile of Clarendon Hills served as maid of honor. Her chiffon gown and short cape were in an orange, yellow, green and gold floral design on a candlelight background. She carried yellow-orange roses.

LAWRENCE'S BROTHER, Preston, of Madison, Wis., was best man.

A reception for 80 guests was held at the Sheraton Inn-Walden following the ceremony. The newlyweds spent a weekend at Lake Geneva before settling in Rockford.

Janet is a graduate of Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge. She works at Rockford's Sundstrand Corp. Lawrence holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Montana, a master's from the University of Nebraska, and is on the teaching staff at Rock Valley College in Rockford.

Donna Ann Drew–Byron Keith Trimble

A honeymoon in Lake Geneva, Wis., followed the marriage of Donna Ann Drew, daughter of Mrs. Doris M. Drew, Hoffman Estates, and Donald A. Drew, Schaumburg, to Byron Keith Trimble. The groom, known as Keith, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron R. Trimble, Hanover Park.

Nuptials were held at 6 p.m. June 25 at the First Baptist Church of Hoffman Estates.

Donna wore a white organza, chapel-length gown trimmed in Venise lace and a chapel-length veil. She carried a cascade of white carnations, blue and white stephanotis and blue baby's breath.

Gayle Ann Langdon, Hoffman Estates, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Debbie and Dawn, the bride's sisters; Janine Lee Szulc, Hoffman Estates, the bride's cousin and Allison, the groom's sister.

GAYLE, DEBBIE and Dawn wore sky blue satin dresses with chiffon overlays and waist-length chiffon capes. Mathcing picture hats graced their hair and they held pink roses, white and blue carnations and baby's breath.

Janine and Allison were dressed in blue and white floral chiffon and carried baskets of roses, carnations and baby's breath.

Ross Hatcher, Baltimore, Ohio, was best man. The bride's brother, Daryle; her cousin, John Szulc, Hoffman Estates; and the groom's cousin, Matthew Meinert, St. Joseph, Mo., also attended the groom.

A reception for 75 guests followed at Mallard West Apartment clubhouse, Schaumburg.

Donna graduated in '75 from Conant High School and attended Harper College. Keith graduated in '74 from Schaumburg High and this past June from Judson College, Elgin. He works for Mutual of Omaha, Des Plaines. The newlyweds live in Schaumburg.

Diane Tessmer–William Hart

Jobs at Northern Trust Co., Chicago, brought about the meeting of Diane Marie Tessmer and William G. Hart. Their wedding was held June 25 in First Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights.

Diane is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Tessmer Jr., Arlington Heights; William is the son of the James A. Harts, Kenilworth.

For the 5 p.m. candlelight double ring ceremony, Diane chose a white princess-styled chiffonette gown re-embroidered in Alencon lace. A Juliet headpiece held her chapel veil, and she carried white roses and stephanotis with ivy and asparagus ferns.

Maid of honor was Melissa A. Greenwood, Buffalo Grove. Bridesmaids were Dorene S. Badalamenti, Diane's sister from Prairie View; Linda S. Kessler, Arlington Heights; and the groom's two sisters from Kenilworth, Kathryn H. and Sarah D.

ALL WORE LIME green jersey gowns and carried nosegays of daisies, yellow roses, baby's breath and ferns.

William's brother, John W., was best man. Diane's brother, Donald A., Urbana, Thomas Eggleston, Indianapolis, and Peter and James McNitt, Winnetka, also served the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hart

A dinner reception for 160 guests was held in River Forest Country Club, Elmhurst. The couple then left for two weeks in the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

Diane, a graduate of Prospect High School and Western Illinois University, is attending Northwestern University's graduate school of business. William is a graduate of Dartmouth College, and Northwestern Graduate School of Management. Both work at Northern Trust Co. and are making their home in Deerfield.

Lamar, Sox rip Toronto

TORONTO, Can. — Led by home runs from Eric Soderholm, Brian Downing, and Lamar Johnson, who drove in five runs, the White Sox resumed play after the All-Star break with a 10-3 win over the Blue Jays here Friday night.

The Sox, who had managed just two earned runs in 17 previous innings this year against Toronto starter Jerry Garvin, pounded out 11 hits and nine runs off the 21-year-old left hander who was knocked out of the game in the four-run Sox ninth inning.

Wilbur Wood made the start for the Sox and lasted six innings to get the win, his fifth in seven decisions, with relief help from Lerrin LaGrow, who earned his 17th save. Wood was forced to leave the game when a blister developed on his pitching hand.

THE WIN KEPT the first-place White Sox two full games ahead of the second-place Kansas City Royals, who topped Detroit Friday, 5-4.

Wood gave up just two runs in his six innings of work, a home run in the third inning by Hector Torres and another in the fifth when Al Woods scored on a fielder's choice when the Sox couldn't get the final half of an inning-ending double play. Wood walked three and struck out one.

The Sox struck early, coming up with three runs in the second inning. Richie Zisk doubled, then Johnson doubled him home to lead off the inning. Chet Lemon followed by grounding out, but Soderholm stepped in and cracked a two-run homer.

The Sox didn't score again until the eighth when they put the game out of reach with a three run outburst. With a man on second, the Blue Jays elected to intentionally walk Richie Zisk to pitch to Lamar Johnson. But Johnson beat that strategy by walloping a three-run homer that gave the Sox a 6-2 lead. Johnson was 4-for-5 on the night.

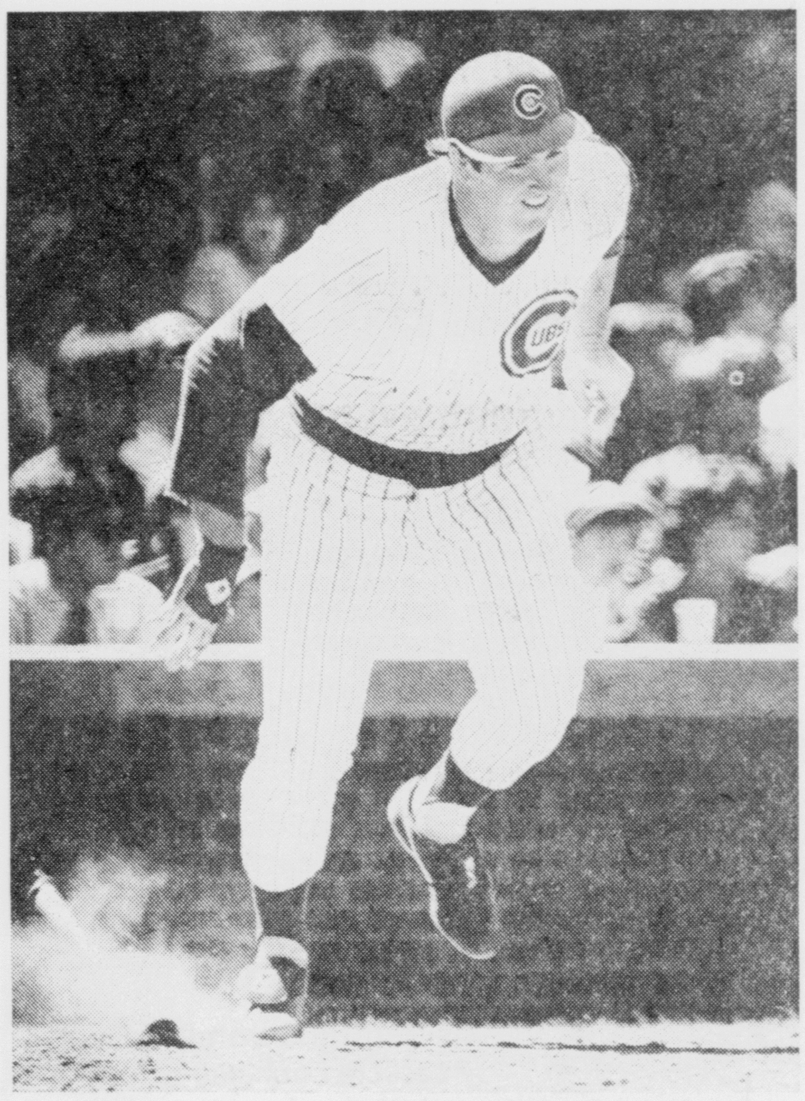
THE SOX ADDED four more in the ninth, the big blow coming off the bat of Brian Downing, who got his first home run of season, a two-run shot.

The Blue Jays got an unearned run in the ninth when Ralph Garr dropped a game-ending fly ball with two-out and runners at first and third, allowing a run to score.

LaGrow then got Steve Staggs to ground out to end the game.

SOX SHORTS: Garr's eighth-inning triple means that the leftfielder has now hit safely in 22 of his last 23 games . . . The series concludes here today with an afternoon contest . . . Ken Kravec (6-2) will pitch for the Sox against former Sox righthander Fete Vuckovich (5-7).

Reuschel gets Cub aid



SINGULAR RICK. Cub winning pitcher Rick Reuschel (13-3) takes off for first base after delivering a key base hit to left field during Cub rally in seventh inning Friday. Reuschel beat Atlanta, 1-0, on a five-hit shutout.

by ART MUGALIAN

Rick Reuschel, a 28-year-old native Illinoisan who could have been a farmer or a computer analyst were he not a major league pitcher, hurled his third shutout of the season and beat Atlanta, 1-0, Friday at Wrigly Field. He also had a pair of line-drive singles, including the key hit in the seventh inning when the Cubs did their daily damage.

BUT REUSCHEL could not have done it all by himself, even though he was in total control throughout and improved his record to 13-3 by allowing just five harmless singles. It was his seventh win in his lsst eight decisions and lowered his ERA to 2.28.

No, big Rick couldn't have done it himself.

Two fly balls were hit to the Cub outfield and both times the fidgety Ladies' Day crowd of 24,576 gasped in terror. But both times the ball was caught.

Reuschel struck out seven Braves, slightly more than normal for Rick. Each time an Atlanta batter whiffed, Cub catcher George Mitterwald prevented the ball from going to the backstop, saving Reuschel untold agony.

THE BIGGEST HELPING hand Reuschel received was from his infield of vacuum cleaners, particularly shortstop Ivan DeJesus and second sacker Manny Trillo. A dozen times the ball was hit right at either Ivan or Manny and a dozen times the ball was snarfed up.

Reuschel was truly grateful.

"Those guys have been doing a great job all year," said Rick. "And Manny's been the best defensive second baseman in the league since he came here, as far as I'm concerned."

Such commendable teamwork didn't extend to the batter's box but still led to a Cub victory. No. 55 of the year. Once again, after much talk of collapse, the first-place North Siders are 20 games over .500.

"As long as we stay ahead of the Phillies, that's all I care about," said Reuschel, eschewing any individual glory.

INDIVIDUAL GLORY or no, Friday's game was a personal triumph for the 6-3, 230-pound pitcher from Camp Point and Western Illinois University. Like a machine on the mound, Reuschel erased 18 of the first 19 batters he faced, 11 of them on ground balls.

At the plate, Reuschel singled the first time up and hit a ball all the way to the warning track on his next at-bat.

"I don't think it was hit well enough to get out even without the wind," he said, commenting on the usual Wrigley Field gale.

His third time with a bat in his hands, Rick was in a game situation. It was the seventh and Braves' righthander Dick Ruthven, just off a debilitating injury, was beginning to tire. Trillo had led with a single, only the sixth hit off Ruthven, and Mitterwald sacrificed him to second for Reuschel.

CUB MANAGER Herman Franks never even considered a pinch-hitter. "Hey, Rick's a good hitter," said Franks.

Reuschel lined a shot past shortstop Darrel Chaney for a base hit, but it was such a hard smash that Trillo had to hold up at third. He scored a moment later when DeJesus bounced a slow roller to second baseman Rod Gilbreath, whose only play was a force on Reuschel at second.

"I'm not looking for any particular pitch at the plate," said Reuschel, now a .213 hitter. "I'm just looking for the ball and trying to hit it."

If worry ever crossed Reuschel's brow, it might have been in the seventh when Gary Matthews opened with a single and tried to steal second. But Mitterwald, throwing as if he never hurt his shoulder four weeks ago, nailed the Brave runner with a perfect peg to Trillo.

AFTER JEFF BURROUGHS legged out a two-out swinging bunt and Biff Pocoroba coaxed Reuschel's only walk, Junior Moore lifted an arching fly down the right-field line that looked like trouble. But Bobby Murcer glided over and caught the ball with an awkward basket catch.

"It was the only way I could catch it," said Bobby, who continued to fight his way out of a slump with a pair of hits. "I sort of lost it in the sun."

Reuschel weathered another scare in the ninth when Rowland Office drove a long one into the wind to left, but Jose Cardenal put it away easily.

"I still felt good in the late innings," said Rick. "I never felt like I was in serious trouble. Serious trouble is the bases loaded and no out.

"I think the cool weather helped me today," added Reuschel, who likes it less than 100 degrees.

State's 16-inch tourney begins

Area softball fans will have an opportunity to see some of the state's top 16-inch, men's softball teams when the Illinois Park and Recreation Assn. Tournament begins today in Des Plaines. A field of 55 squads began single-elimination play at Rand, West, South, Tomahawk and Blackhawk parks at 8 a.m.

After Saturday's three rounds, the remaining quarterfinals, semifinals, and finals are scheduled for Rand Park Sunday morning. Quarterfinals are at 8 a.m., semifinals at 10:30, and finals at noon.

Spectator admission for the entire tournament is free.

Testing...the new voice of the Bears

Joe McConnell

by BOB GALLAS

Joe McConnell, the new radio voice of the Chicago Bears, has taken a lot of kidding as a first-week visitor to the team's training camp in Lake Forest.

McConnell drove to the practice field in a driving rain the first day of camp and when he returned to his car, he found a parking ticket. The joke was that Jack Brickhouse, McConnell's predecessor, hadn't received a parking ticket at 24 previous camps.

The punchline was that Brickhouse had never shown up at a Bears training camp.

"IT MAKES ME feel bad that there are so many bad remarks made about the previous guy here," said McConnell, who at 33 is a veteran of professional football and basketball broadcasting. "I wonder if some day, those same people will be making cracks about me."

McConnell will team up with color man Brad Palmer on the WBBM radio broadcasts of the Bears games this season. The pair replace Brickhouse and Irv Kupcinet, who had come under heavy criticism from the fans for their rah-rah style over the past few seasons.

He promises to bring a new and energetic style to the radio booth this year but adds "that there'll never be any doubt whose side I'm on." He grew up 20 miles outside of Rensselaer, Ind., where the Bears conducted training camp for many years before moving to Lake Forest.

"There'll be no question who I'm for. I've never done network work, so I can be a fan. But many times, I'll get excited for a great play by another team," said McConnell, who comes to the Bears after six seasons as the Minnesota Vikings play-by-play man. "I have to be objective, and I'll never try to cover up. If the team is awful, that's what I'll say."

McCONNELL'S SALT and pepper hair makes him look older than his years but his vitality is obvious. He turned down higher pay in a counter offer, that would have kept him with the Vikings, to come to Chicago. Although he readily admits he is attracted by the many opportunities the Chicago market offers the broadcaster, he also knows that the Bears are destined for bigger and better times.

"I knew what Jim Finks (now Bears general manager) had done in Minnesota. The Bears are young and coming."

McConnell's experience runs the gamut from football and basketball to auto racing and golf. Before his six-year hitch in Minnesota, he broadcast the Denver Bronco games back in the days of the American Football League.

In addition to once doing Indiana State football and basketball games, McConnell was formerly the voice of the National Basketball Assn. Phoenix Suns and currently is the play-by-play voice of the NBA Indiana Pacers. He's also broadcast golf and auto racing, including the Indianapolis 500 time trials.

HIS STYLE IS energetic. Some compare his on air performance to that of Jim Durham, the dynamic voice of the Chicago Bulls.

McConnell is spending two or more weeks at the Bears camp, this summer to learn the players and coaches. Though he won't be on the air, he and booth mate Palmer will be going through a practice broadcast run this Monday night when the Bears scrimmage at Soldier Field for the benefit of the Chicago Public League Athletic Fund.

"I know we'll have a few bugs the first few times out (on-the-air), but it's like a new pair of shoes. They hurt the first time, but after two or three wearings, fit like a glove.

"Actually, I enjoy being the new kid on the block. I figure everyone will listen just to see what I sound like."

BEAR FACTS: Middle linebacker Don Rives missed Friday's afternoon workout, but not because of injury . . . Rives was with his wife Sammye, who gave birth Friday to the couple's first child, a boy . . . Safety Gary Fencik, a Barrington High School product, returned to practice Friday after missing a few days with a leg injury . . . Cornerback Virgil Livers is still out with a leg injury suffered the first day of workouts . . . Coach Jack Pardee said Monday night's Soldier Field scrimmage will concentrate on the passing game, rather than the run, because of a shortage of running backs in camp and the team need for a beefed up passing game . . . Tickets for the scrimmage, all selling for $4 . . . can be purchased at all Ticketron outlets.

Royals stay hot, beat Detroit, 5-4

From Herald Wire Services

Al Cowens hit his 16th home run with two out in the 12th inning Friday night, enabling the Kansas City Royals to equal a club record of eight straight victories with a 5-4 triumph over the stubborn Tigers in Detroit.

Twice Detroit rallied from two-run deficits to tie the game after the eighth inning before Cowens, who had totalled just 16 home runs in his three previous major league seasons, put a John Hiller fast ball into the upper deck in left. Hiller is now 5-10 while Doug Bird boosted his record to 6-1 with 2-1/3 innings of one-hit relief.

IN BLOOMINGTON, Minn., Bobby Bonds hit his 20th homer and drove in three runs to help the California Angels defeat the Twins, 6-2.

Ken Brett allowed eight hits, including solo homers to Lyman Bostock in the sixth and Dan Ford in the seventh, to gain his seventh triumph in 15 decisions.

IN BOSTON, Ric Wise scattered seven hits and Butch Hobson, extending his hitting streak to 16 games, doubled home a pair of first inning runs to pace the Red Sox to a 3-0 triumph over the Cleveland Indians.

Wise, picking up his seventh win in 11 decisions, struck out three and walked one in notching his second shutout of the season.

IN NEW YORK, Sal Bando drove in two runs with a gift double and Von Joshua added a two-run homer in a four-run seventh inning to pace the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-3 victory over the Yankees.

After a single by Ed Romero and a walk to Steve Brye, Bando hit a liner which center fielder Mickey Rivers misjudged and allowed to fall behind him. Sparky Lyle relieved starter Mike Torrez, 8-10, and Joshua greeted him with a shot into the right field stands.

AT BALTIMORE, Bert Blyleven tossed a four-hitter and equalled his career high with 14 strikeouts in pitching the Texas Rangers to a 5-1 triumph over the Orioles.

Blyleven struck out every batter in the Orioles' lineup with the exception of Doug DeCinces in raising his record to 9-9. DeCinces doubled home the Orioles' run in the second inning.

Special racquetball clinics

A special series of racquetball instructional group programs has been scheduled by The Court House, 106 E. College Dr., Arlington Heights and the Schaumburg Court House, 1450 Payne Rd., Schaumburg.

Starting the week of July 25th each group will meet weekly for six weeks. Classes will be offered throughout the day and night Monday through Saturday. Each of the hour-long beginner, advanced beginner, intermediate and advanced intermediate classes will be offered to men, women and juniors.

Enrollment will be $27 or $30, depending upon the hour and the day of the class. Membership in the Court House is a requirement.

For detailed information about the Arlington lessons contact Brian Bennett, manager, or Phil Klintworth, pro, at 398-4656.

Information about the Schaumburg lessons can be obtained by contacting Manager Jeff Oslance or Head Pro Bonnie Korytowski at 882-4636.

Pittsburgh defeats Reds

From Herald Wire Services

Bill Robinson, who tripled home the tying run in the 10th inning, singled home Dave Parker with the winning run with two out in the 12th inning Friday night to give the Pittsburgh Pirates an 8-7 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

Dave Parker doubled off losing pitcher Jack Billingham and Robinson, who almost blew the game for the Pirates in the 10th when he was doubled up at the plate after tagging up and trying to score on a pop out down the first base line, delivered a single to left for the winning run.

The Reds had taken a 7-6 lead in the 10th on a run-scoring single by Dan Driessen, but the Pirates tied it in their half of the inning on a single by Parker and Robinson's triple off the left field wall.

Joe Morgan's three-run homer with two out in the ninth featured a four-run Cincinnati rally that sent the game into extra innings.

Bob Watson singled home two runs with two out in the ninth inning in St. Louis Friday night to give the Houston Astros a 4-2 victory over the Cardinals.

Roger Metzger beat out an infield hit to open the inning and pitcher Mark Lemongello sacrificed him to second with a sacrifice bunt. Reliever Clay Carroll walked Wilbur Howard intentionally and both runners advanced on Enos Cabell's infield out. Cesar Cedeno was intentially walked and Watson then singled up the middle to score two runs.

Lemongello, who boosted his record to 3-11, gave up nine hits in going the distance.

Joe Ferguson, who singled home a run in the sixth for the Astros, tied the score in the eighth with another two-out, run-scoring single.

Forego heads Brooklyn Handicap

NEW YORK (UPI) — Threetime Horse of the Year Forego will be giving away as much as 31 pounds today as the big gelding goes after his fourth consecutive victory in the $100,000-added mile-and-a-half Brooklyn Handicap at Belmont Park.

Forego will be carrying 137 pounds, top weight among the 15 horses entered in the race, and 17 more than his nearest competitor, Hunza Dancer, who was weighted at 120 pounds.

However, indications were that trainer Scobie Breasley would not run Hunza Dancer, who was part of an entry with Indus Warrior, aiming instead for Monday's $150,000 Sunset Handicap on grass. That leaves Indus Warrior at second weight with 115 pounds, and Great Contractor third at 112 pounds.

FOREGO, seven years old, won the 1974 Brooklyn under 129 pounds, the 1975 race under 132 pounds and last year's carrying 134 pounds, when the race was a mile and a quarter.

"I debated with myself over giving Forego 136 pounds," said race secretary Tommy Trotter. "But if I had given Forego less, I would have had to assign less to the others, and I don't think the trainers of those horses could find riders light enough to make the weights."

Willie Shoemaker will be riding Forego in the Brooklyn, which is the third leg in the Handicap Triple. The first two legs were the Metropolitan and Suburban Handicaps. Forego easily won the Metropolitan, but faltered in the prestigious Suburban, in which he carried 138 pounds. Shoemaker said after the Suburban that the high weight and the distance caused Forego to drift out badly as they headed into the stretch, with Forego losing by a neck.

Forego is rated at even money on the morning line and will leave from post number 14. The second choice, Co Host, drew the rail and is tabbed at 5-1. He will be ridden by Eddie Maple, while Jorge Velasquez will ride the third choice, Our Mims, who is listed at 6-1.

The entries, from post position No. 1 out, include Co Host (109), 5-1; Group Plan (107), 10-1; Coverac (111), 30-1; a-Hunza Dancer (120), 10-1; b-American History (110), 15-1; Cunning Trick (106), 10-1; Great Contractor (112), 10-1; Our Mims (110), 6-1; b-Iron Constitution (111), 15-1; Gentle King (109), 15-1; Mullineaux (107), 30-1; Amano (107), 50-1; Forego (137), even; and a-Indus Warrior (115), 10-1.

Sutter at bank for autographs

Cub relief ace Bruce Sutter will be one of the featured guests for a special airing of Sports Page, the WWMM-FM (92.7) sports talk show, this morning live at the Mount Prospect State Bank, 111 E. Busse Rd.

Sutter, who has appeared in more than half the Cubs games this season, will be joined by Milt Pappas, ex-Cub pitcher and currently the manager of the Chicago Storm professional softball team.

Sutter will sign autographs and answer questions from the public from 9 to 10 a.m. The public is invited.

Planting seeds for the future

This year's final fish stocking in Illinois' portion of Lake Michigan took place Thursday at the 95th St. boat ramp at Calumet Park in Chicago.

Between 25,000 and 30,000 rainbow trout were put in the lake by Illinois Department of Conservation fishery biologist Harry Wight. The fish were being transported by tank truck from the federal hatchery in Genoa, Wis.

The rainbows put over the 800,000 mark the number of fish stocked this year, an amount well below early plans for a record 1.2 million stocking but still the largest Lake Michigan stocking since the program began.

OVER A MILLION fish were stocked in 1974. Since then, supplies of fish from the federal government and other states have been harder to purchase.

Salmon Unlimited, the Chicago based sportfishing organization, contributed 100,000 rainbow and 8,000 chinook which were purchased from a private hatchery in Peterson, Minn.

As in recent years, the preponderance of fish stocked in Illinois waters were the large, deep running chinook, with 346,696 being released.

Only 102,742 coho salmon were stocked because of limited availability. Both the Department of Conservation and Salmon Unlimited were unable to buy any more than that number.

NO BROWN TROUT were available from the federal government. Some 166,000 lake trout and 171,660 rainbow trout had already been stocked in Lake Michigan this year.

Wight said he would like to stock 400,000 coho and 400,000 chinook next year with 200,000 each of the other trout species based upon his past surveys of angler success.

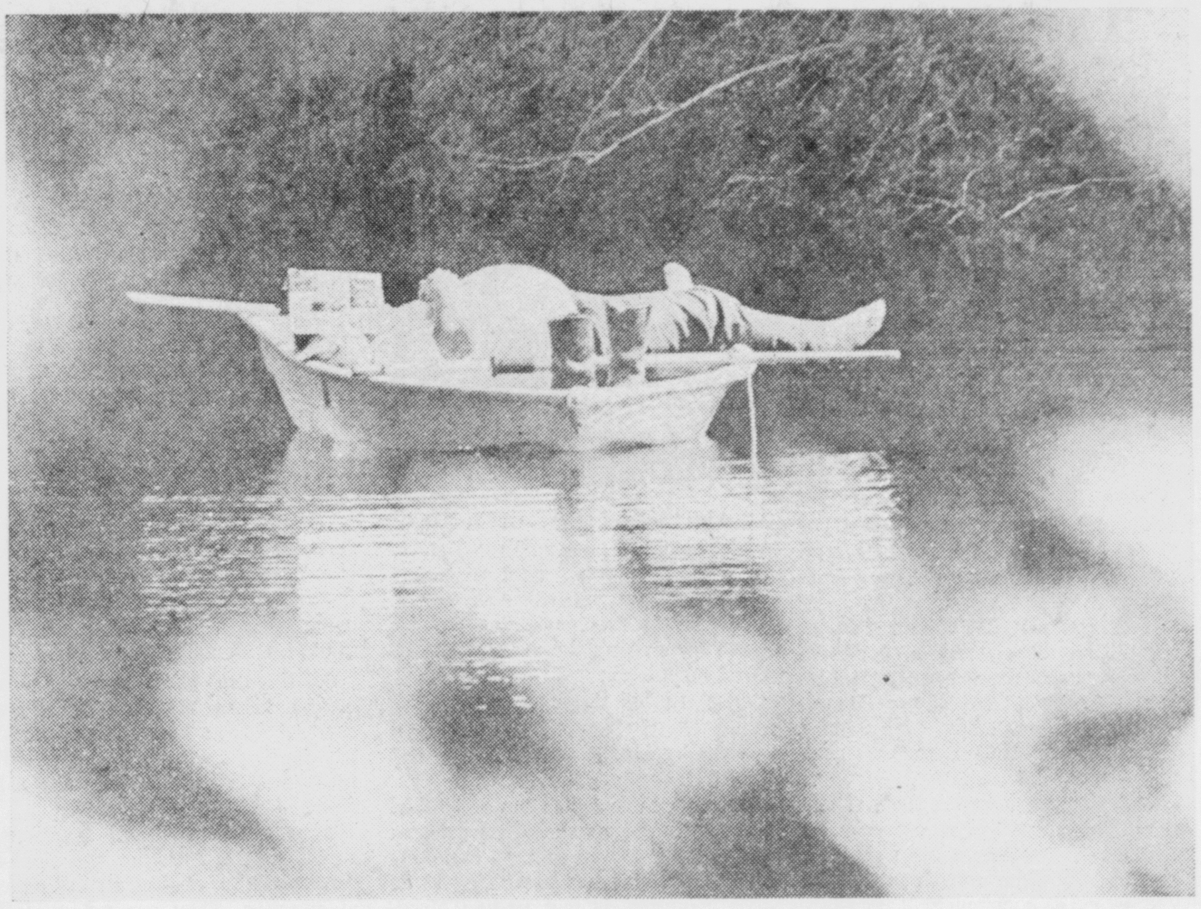
He said he doubts, however, that such an extensive stocking could take place until the state acquired more sophisticated fish hatchery facilities of its own.

Ski packages sell

CHICAGO (UPI) — Michigan currently is sweltering under a prolonged heat wave, but its Travel Information Center here is selling ski weekends in Michigan to out-of-staters. Sanford Horowitz, manager of the Chicago office, said that as of July 1, his office has coordinated movements of 18,500 skiers for 1977-78 ski weeks or weekends in Michigan. The figure represents members of ski clubs and groups from the Chicago and greater Chicago area. The figure is still rising with the ski season four or five months away. The Chicago office has processed over 300,000 Michigan vacation inquiries in less than four years. A second regional office is located in Cleveland.

Teen nets record fish

STURGEON BAY, Wis. (UPI) — Thirteen-year-old Gene Lieschow of Algoma, Wis., caught a world's record Tiger Trout fishing off the Sturgeon Bay breakwater Thursday. Leischow's prize weighed 14 pounds, 11¾ ounces, nearly a pound heavier than the previous record, according to the State Department of Natural Resources. Leischow caught the fish during a fishing contest sponsored by a local firm. He used a Mr. Champ lure and 10 pound test line, according to a contest official.



SUMMER'S DOG DAYS have slowed fishing in northern Illinois, especially when you don't have a fishing rod. A rowboat and a calm lake still provide a good place to take a nap.

Fishing success is dancing a jig

Jim Cook

Outdoor editor

The list of fishermen's worst enemies might read something like this: rain, wind, mosquitoes and the end of July.

Summer's dog days are like dropping a tranquilizer into the favorite fishing hole. When the water warms into the high 60s and 70-degree marks, fish, like humans, become sluggish and inactive. Succulent nightcrawlers appear as vegetables on a kid's plate.

Presentation of a lure or bait takes on added significant. Attracting a fish's attention is incidental to intimidating it into striking.

Live bait is usually superior over artificials, although wobbly, darting and menacing-action plugs such as flatfish and jointed Rapalas anger fish into nitting.

Panfish must also be enticed. Still fishing is no longer suitable since species such as crappie and bluegill are not actively feeding.

Jigging has become the solution to summer panfish angling. Whether bounced off the bottom, hopped, ripped or fluttered, the jig can be interpreted to portray any one of a number of forage fish.

The retrieve is as instrumental as the appearance. Besides altering the action of the jig, a change of retrieve will either lull a fish to sleep or intimidate it into attaching.

HERE ARE SOME suggestions to follow while jigging for panfish during the end of July's dog days:

- Use monofilament line as light as conditions permit. The smaller the jig, the lighter the line as heavy line will inhibit the action of a small jig.
- Tie the jig directly to the line, avoiding leaders, snaps, swivels and sinkers. If more weight is needed to cast into the wind or to compensate for boat size, use a heavier leadhead.
- Tip jigs with small minnows, pieces of worm or pork rind that will add scent to the jig.

Any irregular movements by the rod tip should be met with a sharp, crisp snap to set the hook into the fish's jaw.

Northwestern's Breitbeil to open as reserve QB

by JOHN PONT

Northwestern football coach

EVANSTON, Ill. — The No. 1 priority in spring football was not personnel, offense or defense. What I was looking for was a state of mind.

Did the 1-10 1976 season affect our players adversely? Were they still reacting from it or was it a thing divorced from their minds and one which would not affect their performance?

To possibly counter any such negative mental affects, we planned on having regular game situations rather than simply scrimmaging. We replayed our Indiana game, the Iowa contest and the Wisconsin game by re-establishing those same situations and then placing the ball exactly where it had been at those times and taking it from there.

WE DIDN'T DO this every day, but several times, and I feel that the reaction was a positive one. I didn't notice any hangovers from 1976.

The natural question was who would be the quarterback and would Paul Maly fit the bill as a linebacker after three years of competition at nose guard.

It was decided that Scott Stranski, a candidate for the quarterback position, would forget baseball for the first 10 days of spring football. Scott was a different person than he was last fall. His arm was extremely strong, his decisions on passing excellent, and he ran with authority.

It's my feeling that if he ends up being the quarterback, we will have another dimension to our offense, that is, a true sprint out game along with more option football.

STEVE BREITBEIL (a Rolling Meadows graduate) came on strong and it's going to be a two-man race, but Scott, based on his seven days of competition, will start off as No. 1 and we'll take it from there.

The decision to move Maly was based on the game he played against Illinois. He moved all over the field, had a natural knack and reaction to the linebacker position. The move, however, would not have been a permanent one had not Lodi Vercelli, a linebacker, made the transition to nose guard.

Where Paul was quick, Lodi was strong. Lodi, we feel, would have been the best noseguard in the Big Ten. I now feel he will be one of the best all around athletes in Big Ten competition.

Mike Taylor, a defensive back, was moved to wide receiver. We lost Rob Dean and Scott Yelvington and Mike gives us an experienced performer, one with speed and knowledge of defense, so with Todd Sheets, Mark Bailey and Taylor, I believe our receiver corps will be in good shape.

OUR OFFENSIVE line will be much better and for the first time we will have depth at every position. I am somewhat concerned that Dan Cleary and Wally Kasprzycki were out of spring drills, Dan because of the ankle break suffered a year ago and Wally because of neck problems. Dan, however, will be back and will give us the strong blocking desperately needed in our offense. There is some question whether Wally will return.

We were a much more aggressive team on defense. We had seen signs of it last fall, but we also saw lapses where the teams would jump on us and score rather quickly. The hitting was much more consistent, I think due in part of the amount of individual hitting stressed by our coaches.

In the spring Rudi Tanck, a starting offensive guard, suffered a slight tear of a ligament and did have surgery. He will however have four months and two weeks of rehabilitation, and it's our hope he will be back, which would mean this was the best spring ever as far as injuries were concerned.

We concluded our spring drill after 15 days and we were asked why we didn't practice 20 days when we could have. The reason was quite simple. We had only one tight end after our third week. Our possible quarterback was out for baseball, as well as the starting defensive corner back and three others.

BECAUSE OF nagging injuries, we had eight other starters not practicing, so we just couldn't organize or practice properly. Since football is a contact game, we didn't want to beat one tight end into the ground.

Another reason is that I was perfectly satisfied with our 15 days. I don't think there's any magic in the number of 20. We had a successful concluson to the spring drills.

As to the Big Ten, it's hard to say. Ohio State returns a great number of outstanding individuals as does Michigan, but I think the 95 scholarship limit now will start to have its affect on individual contests as well as the league race.

Where does Northwestern fit in all of this? I think we've done our homework in recruiting, and we've presevered through a very hard season without losing poise or a confident attitude. I feel we can be a team that has a winning season in 1977.

Kentucky Lake contest

For the 19th straight year resort and motel operators at Kentucky Lake are preparing for their annual Fall Fishing Derby. Starting Aug. 15 and running through October, the Derby will again offer amateur anglers weekly competition in six fishing categories. It is the oldest continuous fishing contest of its kind in the nation.

Largemouth and white bass, crappie, sauger, catfish and bluegill will be the targets of those who enter the free contest. Weekly winners are awarded cash prizes and merchandise. The contest is open to those registered at participating resorts, motels, camp grounds and houseboat rentals.

"The Fall Fishing Derby was set up 19 years ago to help spread the word about our good autumn fishing," stated Harry Hester, a resort owner who heads up the sponsoring Kentucky Lake Vacationland Assn.

"MOST VACATIONERS come here during summer and are gone home when fishing really picks up. All our species of gamefish move back into shallow water in September and October. We'll send information about fall fishing to anybody who writes to Fall Fishing Derby, Dept. W, Box 342, Benton, Ky. 42025."

More than $90,000 has wound up in the pockets of amateur contestants since the Derby's beginnings. Besides weekly prizes, grand cash awards are paid those catching the season's largest fish in each category.

Best bass this fall will be worth $500; the largest white bass, crappie, catfish and sauger will fetch $200. The bluegill grand prize is $100.

"Conditions are generally ideal for fishing at Kentucky Lake in the fall," Hester continued. "The days are mild, and the nights are cool. Shoreline scenery is beautiful, and there are a lot of activities for those who don't fish all day," he added.

Jury clears Noll of slander charges

SAN FRANCISCO — The Pittsburgh Steelers and their coach, Chuck Noll, were cleared by a jury Friday of slander charges brought by Oakland Raiders defensive back George Atkinson. The U.S. District Court panel of four women and two men deliberated for four hours before returning their verdict. The trial lasted nine days.

Atkinson filed his suit after Noll accused him of being a member of a "criminal element" in the National Gootball League for a defensive play against Steelers wide-receiver Lynn Swann. Dan Rooney, president of the Steelers, said after learning of the verdict, "I'm pleased. It's (the trial) the most depressing experience of my life, but I'm happy I got a fair trial. The press treated us fairly all the way. I'm glad it's through." Don Mason, one of Atkinson's lawyers, refused comment.

Merger pact gets in way of Nets move

NEW YORK—New York Knicks President Michael Burke testified Friday that the New York Nets are barred from moving from Long Island to New Jersey under the terms of the NBA-ABA merger agreement signed with his basketball club in 1976.

Burke's testimony came in the first day of a non-jury trial before Judge Robert L. Carter in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

While Burke was testifying in New York, the state of New Jersey filed suit in Newark against the Nets and Knicks to invalidate the agreement between the two teams.

At the same time, the owners of the Nets filed a petition for removal of a show-cause order signed in Nassau County Supreme Court Thursday. Friday's removal petition transfers all litigation to the federal jurisdiction of Judge George C. Pratt in the Westbury branch of federal court.

Trevino, Stacy lead golf tournaments

Lee Trevino continued his strong putting to scramble to a 4-under-par 68 Friday and extend his lead to three strokes over Jack Nicklaus and Tom Kite in the second round of the Canadian Open in Oakville, Ont.

Trevino had one birdie on the front nine and three birdies on the back of the 7,129-yard Glen Abbey Course, including a wedge shot sunk on the 13th hole to give him a 36-hole total of 135, 9-under par.

In Chaska, Minn., Hollis Stacy, a smiling 23-year-old veteran from Savannah, Ga., fired a 1-over-par 73 and held on to the lead in the U.S. Women's Open Golf Tournament at the halfway mark with a 1-under 143.

The 5-foot-5 Stacy, who was at 2-under 70 after the opening round, worked her overall score to 4-under on the tough Hazeltine course with birdies on the third and 13th holes. But she bogied 15, 17 and 18 and had 35-38-73 for the day.

Jockey Cruguet faces $2 million suit

LOS ANGELES—An usher at Hollywood Park race track filed a $2 million damage suit today against jockey Jean Cruguet for injuries suffered in an altercation July 3 a few hours before Cruguet's mount, Seattle Slew, suffered the first defeat of his racing career.

The suit filed in Superior Court also named Cruguet's wife, Denise, as a defendant. It sought $1 million personal damages for Patsy Di Tommaso and $1 million punitive damages.

Di Tommaso claimed he suffered nose cuts and other facial injuries in a struggle with the Cruguets at the exclusive Turf Club entrance when they sought to push past him without identifying themselves.

The Summer of '77

Legion teams stalk national fame

Don Friske

Byline report

During this week and the next, the Arlington Heights American Legion baseball team is preparing itself for the upcoming Cook County tournament.

The Arlington players are keeping sharp by competing against non-league teams since their other Ninth District opponents have been involved in the league playoffs.

Only a year ago, Arlington provided good timing by completing the most successful Legion season in local history by finishing second in the nation.

NOW, LARGELY because of that achievement, local Legion baseball is closing one of its most successful summers. The key to it all was participation.

Last summer, the Ninth District was little more than a two-team league, especially in terms of local interest. Arlington and Logan Square, another area mainstay, kept Legion ball alive in the area through the troubled years of the recent past.

Park Ridge and Tattler Post of Chicago also helped to maintain some semblance of a league, but they were never really close enough to gain an interest in these surrounding suburbs.

Arlington and Logan Square battled in a five-game series one year ago to determine the winner of the Ninth District. It was one of the best played series in memory, with Arlington finally taking the title.

THAT VICTORY ALLOWED the Arlington team to move forward, something it kept doing until the final game of the national tournament. When it was over, Arlington had become the nation's second-best American Legion team.

Then, during last winter, Arlington coach Lloyd Meyer discovered just how important his team's season had been for the Ninth District.

"Many people called me and asked how they could get something going in their area," Meyer said. "I definitely think our finish had something to do with Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows coming in."

Coaches Tony Stompanato of Schaumburg and El Berg of Rolling Meadows did a good job of fitting right into the district schedule. Even though both teams were eliminated in tournament play this week, they were competitive with the more established outfits they faced.

THEIR MAIN PROBLEM, one that faces most first-year operations, was inconsistency. But, according to Meyer, both were capable of winning the Ninth District title.

"I think these teams did pretty well for the first year," Meyer said. "But of course they always came out to play harder for us than for anyone else. I could tell this because when we would take fielding practice before a game early in the season, everyone would just sit and watch us."

But this time of the summer seems always to be reserved for Meyer-coached teams. It is a time when he has his players finely tuned, past the fundamentals and into the stage of instinct baseball.

When the Cook County tournament begins Aug. 4, Arlington will start its drive again for another shot at national attention. They are automatically in the tourney because their home site, Recreation Park, is the host facility this year.

MEYER SAID THE recent downfall of summer high school baseball is another factor in the upsurge of local Legion ball. "The summer league did hurt Legion play for awhile, but it never affected me because I got along with the high school coaches. Now, it's just not as good as it was a few years ago. Many of the juniors in high school should be playing Legion ball," Meyer said.

That, combined with national attention, has brought back the type of interest necessary to maintain league balance and the rivalries that go with it.

"Legion ball is stronger all over than it was a few years ago," Meyer said. "People just figure that maybe their team can win the state title."

In 1965, Arlington finished fifth in national competition, good enough for some sort of local reaction. But it was a different situation.

"AT THAT TIME, Legion ball was pretty strong," Meyer said. "Our finish then didn't spark nearly as much interest as this one did."

And that, simply enough, was why 1976 was a timely summer to finish in a spot of national prestige.

RHYTHM BAND

Let's make a rhythm band! During the next few weeks we'll tell you how to make instruments to shake, rattle, and thump to your favorite tunes. First, some tapping sounds.

Rhythm sticks. Cut two 12" pieces from a ½" dowel rod. Sand the ends smooth. Decorate with felt-tipped markers or tempera paint. To play, tap sticks together.

Claves. These short, chubby sticks are often used with calpyso and Spanish music. Cut two 8" pieces from a 1" dowel rod. Color with dark stain or shoe polish. To play, hold one across one hand. Tap it with the other clave.

Vitamins play important role in body growth

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to David Wonderly, 10, of Palmerton, Pa., for his question:

HOW MANY KINDS OF VITAMINS ARE THERE?

A vitamin is a complex substance that is essential to the human body for growth and health. All of the functions of the vitamins are not completely known, but we do know they seem to have specific uses that one cannot be replaced for another. Lack of one vitamin in an otherwise complete diet can result in a deficiency disease, such as rickets or scurvy.

At the present time scientists say we may soon be adding more vitamins to the list of about 25 we can currently identify.

There are two general classes: fat-soluble vitamins which include A, D, E and K and the water-soluble group which include C and the B-complex vitamins.

Vitamin A was the first fat-soluble vitamin discovered. It helps maintain skin, eyes, urinary tract and the linings of the nervous, respiratory and digestive systems. It is needed for the normal growth of bones and teeth. We obtain vitamin A in sweet potatoes, milk, liver, eggs, butter, green and yellow vegetables.

Vitamin B-complex is about 15 water-soluble vitamins which at first were believed to be only one. B-1, called thiamine (found in meat, whole-grain cereals, nuts, soybeans, peas, potatoes and most vegetables) is needed to help the heart and nervous system function properly. B-2, called riboflavin (found in milk, cheese, liver, fish and poultry) is needed to help body cells use oxygen, to promote tissue repair and to maintain healthy skin.

Vitamin C, called ascorbic acid, is essential for sound bones and teeth and is also needed for tissue metabolism and wound healing. It can be found in citrus fruits, tomatoes, raw cabbage, potatoes, strawberries and cantaloupe.

Vitamin D is a group of about 10 fat-soluble vitamins that are essential for calcium and phosphorus metabolism. Use of the vitamin also prevents rickets. We obtain it in fish liver oils, fortified milk, eggs, tuna, salmon and sunlight.

Vitamin E (found in whole-grain cereals, lettuce and vegetable oils) helps maintain heart and skeletal muscles while vitamin K (found in leafy vegetables and made by intestinal bacteria) is needed for normal blood clotting.

One of the earliest men in history to realize the harm of vitamin deficiency was Kanehiro Takaki, surgeon general of the Japanese Navy, who in 1882 was able to greatly reduce the number of beriberi cases on ships crews by adding meat and vegetables to their rice diets.

Andy sends a Denoyer-Geppert World Globe to Cindy Rabbe, 12, of Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, for her question:

WHAT IS SMOKE?

We have smoke when finely divided solid particles become suspended and mixed in a gas. Most smoke is caused by particles of carbon from burning fuel.

More than $1 billion is lost annually in North America as a result of smoke. In cities, automobiles and manufacturing sends tons of smoke into the air causing blackened buildings, corroded metals and damaged vegetables. Human life is also bothered by smoke.

Smoke trapped in a weather condition called an inversion, where there are no vertical air currents to remove the smoke or smog, can be especially dangerous. Much attention these days is being given to the problem of air pollution.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

One of the most important parts of slam bidding is the slam invitation. If you can invite a slam without going past game and then stop at game you are far better off than the man who gets into the twilight zone between game and slam and then winds up down one at a five-heart or five-spade contract.

The ace-king rule comes in mighty handy here. You find yourself with an extra ace or king opposite a partner who is taking you to game. You don't have enough to want to go past game, but you sure want to find a way to tell your partner about slam interest.

South can take the ace of clubs out of his hand and still have a proper one-spade response. So when North jumps to three spades, South shows his slam interest by bidding four clubs. With no slam interest he would just bid four spades.

North likes his hand and proceeds to show his like for it by his four-diamond call. Again, with no slam interest he would simply go to four spades. Now South looks at his three little hearts and decides that he has gone far enough. He does bid four spades.

The bad trump break makes five spades an impossible contract. In fact South must play very carefully to make four.

Bethlehem Steel slates price hikes

The Bethlehem Steel Corp. Friday announced it will boost prices by roughly 6 per cent on structural shape products and about 7 per cent on tin mills products, effective Sept. 4. The pricing action by Bethlehem came one day after U.S. Steel Corp., the No. 1 steelmaker, announced similar increases. Charles Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, told a news conference Thursday the U.S. Steel price move was "inconsistent . . . with the task of fighting inflation." U.S. Steel said its price hikes, scheduled to take effect Sept. 14, would help pay for labor costs under a new wage agreement, effective Aug. 1.

4 firms indicted in price fixing

A federal grand jury Friday indicted four corporations and two individuals on charges they conspired to fix prices for paint resins. Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell said the indictment and a companion civil suit were filed in U.S. District Court in Louisville. Corporations named were Ashland Oil Inc., of Ashland, Ky.; Cargill Inc., of Minneapolis; Reichhold Chemicals Inc., of White Plains, N.Y.; and Reliance Universal Inc., of Louisville, Ky. Individuals named were Arthur H. Klobe, vice president and general manager of Cargill's Chemical Products Division, and Lyle J. Rockenbach, vice president of Reichhold.

House OKs sugar price boost

The House Friday approved a plan to raise sugar market prices about 4 cents a pound, a move which critics said could boost sugar costs by nearly $1 billion a year for consumers, soft drink makers and food processors. The House vote went against administration officials who want to help hard-pressed sugar growers by a direct subsidy system which would not raise consumer prices but could cost up to $500 million a year in taxpayer funds. Officials said they would seek defeat of the House plan in a Senate-House conference.

Toyota hikes '77 car prices

Toyota Motors Friday announced it has increased the prices of its 1977 model cars and trucks an average $153 — the third price jump in the model year because of the declining value of the U.S. dollar against the Japanese yen. Nissan Inc., importers of Datsun cars and trucks, indicated it would have a new pricing announcement next week to complete a round of price hikes begun earlier this month when Honda boosted its sticker prices an average $148. In Japan, auto manufacturers hinted at further increases because of changes in the change rate between the dollar and the yen which has increased more than 9 per cent since the start of 1977. The latest Toyota increase, averaging 3.8 per cent, ranged from $110 on the lowest-priced model, the two-door Corolla, to $200 on the Celica GT liftback. Toyota said the new prices were effective immediately although cars already in dealer stock are not affected.

Inland Steel cuts back operations

Inland Steel Co. Friday said it was cutting back operations in preparation for a possible strike next month by the largest local in the United Steelworkers Union. Inland laid off 140 workers at its No. 3 open hearth furnace. It planned other cutbacks elsewhere in its huge East Chicago Ind., mill the next few days.

GAF ends camera, dye operations

GAF Corp. Friday announced it will discontinue its consumer camera and photo business and plans to sell its dye and pigment business. The decision resulted in an immediate writedown of $54 million after taxes and produced a loss of $49.5 million in the second quarter. It also will affect 3,600 employees in Binghamton, N.Y., New York City, Portland, Ore., Rensselaer, N.Y., and several other locations. Chairman Jesse Werner said GAF will continue in the industrial photography and photo reproduction business and in the future will concentrate its operations in chemicals, building materials and these industrial photo operations.

Cosmetics get aerosol extension

The Food and Drug Administration Friday gave the cosmetics industry permission to sell some of its aerosol products through the coming Christmas season without applying labels warning of the dangers of fluorocarbon gases. The agency said it was granting an exemption to the industry because certain perfumes and other products already are packaged and it would cost too much if manufacturers have to relabel them. The FDA has ordered all aerosol products under its jurisdiction, the bulk of such products on the market, to carry warning labels as of Oct. 31.

Shortage of carpenters, materials threatens delay in home building

by DAVE IBATA

A shortage of carpenters, appliances and building materials has hit the Chicago housing market, threatening delays in completion of new s single-family homes and a $40-million loss to builders.

"It's a pretty severe problem," said William Kennedy, president of the Home Builders Assn. of Greater Chicago. "It's just creating all kinds of havoc in the industry right now."

The most severe shortage lies in the supply of insulation, according to area builders. Coupled with this is a dearth of carpenters in the Chicago area, according to contractors and developers.

CONSTRUCTION DELAYS have lasted from two weeks to four months, Kennedy said. He estimated the delays could cost the building industry $40 million by the end of the year.

It is unlikely, however, the costs will be passed on to home buyers, he said.

"From the home buyer's standpoint, the worst that can happen is that he or she should be prepared to wait from 30 to 45 days beyond the delivery date the builder estimated," Kennedy said.

Dick Kobylski, sales manager for Levitt Residential Communities Inc., said his firm has 750 homes under construction in the suburbs, including houses in Schaumburg and Buffalo Grove.

He said Levitt, like most builders, began building in March, with delivery dates starting in August and ending in December.

KOBYLSKI SAID Levitt recently sent letters to home buyers advising them of construction delays. He said Levitt would not pass the extra costs of delays on to buyers.

"We'll never go back to the customer and hit him for more money after we've signed the contract," Kobylski said.

He said the extra costs would be negotiated between contractors and developers.

Kennedy said the industry is 20 per cent short of the carpenters it needs in the Chicago area.

Kobylski said, "Wherever there is a construction site, there's a sign up, 'Carpenters wanted.' "

The shortage of insulation largely is because of President Carter's energy package, which includes tax incentives for homeowners who adequately insulate their homes, builders said.

A RUSH OF homeowners to buy extra insulation, plus increased use of insulation in new homes, has put an extra load on manufacturers, builders said.

"Manufacturers didn't plan for all this, and therefore the delays," said Everett Wilson, president of Wilson Enterprises Inc., 1950 Pratt Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

Wilson Enterprises is a distributor of building materials.

"It is very severe," Wilson said. "One of the main suppliers (of insulation), Johns-Manville (of Denver, Colo.), is on strike. But even if they weren't, there still probably wouldn't be enough."

Kennedy said builders also are having difficulty obtaining appliances, bricks, colored plumbing fixtures, oak flooring, specialty wood for windows and doors, and ceramic tiles.

A SHORTAGE of dry wall is expected by August 1, according to the home builders association.

Ralph Harwood Sr., of the Northern Illinois Construction Co., Northbrook, said fuel shortages have crippled the brick-making industry.

"It used to take two to three weeks to get brick deliveries," Harwood said. "Now it takes six to eight weeks, and the price keeps going up."

In addition to carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers and operating engineers also are in short supply, said Stanley Niew, executive vice president of the Residential Employers Council of Chicago.

"During the three-year period that home building was depressed, anywhere from 2,000 to 2,500 carpenters left the industry because they couldn't get work.

"Then, because last winter's hard freeze made it impossible to get building started as early as it should, there was a demand for workers to make up lost time," Niew said.

NIEW SAID in one instance, a builder needed 60 carpenters, but could find only 35. He said another needed 30, but could find only 10.

Kobylski said Levitt has experienced up to a month's delay between the time a home's concrete foundation is poured and the time carpenters finally start work on the site.

The present housing boom contrasts sharply with the construction industry 18 months ago, when unemployment among tradesmen hovered between 12 and 15 per cent.

Construction of single-family homes in the Chicago area is at its highest level since 1959, according to Bell Federal Savings & Loan Assn.

Bell reported 3,412 permits for single-family homes in the Chicago area were issued in April, a 35 per cent increase above the 2,518 permits issued in April 1976.

INCREASED ORDERS for home appliances reflect the housing boom.

Frank Miles, spokesman for the Assn. of Home Appliance Manufacturers in Chicago, said shipments of appliances in June 1977 topped orders for June 1976 by 22 per cent. He said figures for the first half of 1977 showed an 8.7 per cent increase in purchases more than the first half of 1976.

Appliance manufacturers shipped 15.6 million units in the first six months of 1977, compared with 14.3 million shipped in the same period in 1976, Miles said.

A spokesman for General Electric, in Louisville, Ky., said Chicago-area builders have experienced delays of 5 to 10 days in deliveries of refrigerators and electric ranges.

THE HOME BUILDERS association advised that the home buyer:

- Choose quickly when a builder asks him to select colors for roofing, brick, siding, trim, floor coverings and appliances.
- Allow plenty of leeway in opening up a present home or apartment. If in an apartment, negotiate a month-to-month extension of a lease. If in a house, don't promise a firm occupancy date to a new owner until the builder sets an exact date for delivery.

4 banks here face forgery lawsuit

An Elk Grove Village manufacturer has sued four Northwest suburban banks, charging that the institutions allowed a former company manager to deposit $275,275 in forged checks in bank accounts.

Robert Hennessy, president of the Hennessy Industries, 520 Lively Blvd., Friday had no comment on the four suits filed in U.S. District Court. His firm manufactures tire changing equipment.

The suburban banks cited in the Hennessy suit include the Mount Prospect State Bank, 111 E. Busse Ave., Mount Prospect; Bank of Buffalo Grove, 10 E. Dundee Rd., Buffalo Grove; the Suburban Bank of Hoffman Estates, 1100 N. Roselle Rd., Hoffman Estates; and Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 1 S. Northwest Hwy., Park Ridge. The suit charges that the banks failed to act in accordance with reasonable commercial standards for the banking business.

NO COMMENT WAS available from Bank of Buffalo Grove, Suburban Bank of Hoffman Estates and Citizens Bank & Trust Co. At the Mount Prospect State Bank, president Richard Padula Friday said the bank had not been served with the suit. "The bank feels secure that we have followed proper banking procedures," Padula said. "We have adequate insurance to cover it."

The Hennessy suits charged that former employe James P. Ryan opened accounts at the banks during 1975, later depositing 61 forged checks in the accounts. The funds were later withdrawn. The suit asks for the return of the money plus 6 per cent interest on the funds.

Ryan reportedly was arrested this month in Hollywood, Calif. on theft and arson charges related to the forgery incident.

Regulations contradict themselves

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — If we ever needed a new symbol for the modern American government, we might try eliminating the eagle and replacing him with two do-gooders tripping over each other.

As President Carter commendably has recognized, bureaucratic confusion is the way of the world in Washington. Energy regulations conflict with environmental requirements, for example, and even within a specific area separate fiefdoms emerge. Take pollution: Remove contaminants from the air or water, as ordered, and you wind up with solid wastes. What do you do with them? Well, that's the problem of another governmental office entirely. Sorry about that.

It's no wonder that many American businessmen have begun to share in the national neurosis of paranoia. No matter how hard they try to comply with the burgeoning federal, state and municipal regulations in such areas as the environment and job safety, they wind up confused by conflicting requirements, and despised by the general public, which tells pollsters that it perceives industry as a major threat to its health and welfare.

WELL, BUSINESSMEN just could sit around and feel sorry for themselves — or they could try to do something about all this. One industry spokesman who prefers the latter course has told me that he thinks it's time for a "third party" to resolve the differences between business and those in government who are charged with regulating it.

Jackson B. Browning, who directs health, safety and environmental affairs for the Union Carbide Corp., favors creation of what he calls "a blue-ribbon commission to give over-all perspective to the regulation problem."

And if government doesn't act quickly to set up such a commission, Browning said the private sector should take the first step. "To this end," he said, "my company is willing — right now — to commit ourselves to fiscal participation in establishing a grant to be administered by an independent academic study group or foundation. The end result of the project should be the kind of integrated approach to environmental policy so desperately needed by our nation."

CRITICS WILL, of course, accuse Union Carbide of grandstanding — and some may wonder whether the company is not just plotting an end run around governmental regulation. Browning pleads innocent, and argues further that his proposal is not antigovernment.

"I think it is time to drop the adversary postures with which government and business have been approaching one another," he said. "Our national problems are too large, too long-range and too complex, the crises are too imminent and the effects on our population too deep to prolong the battle of wills and entrenched positions.

"It is time for business in general, and our industry in particular, to make available, candidly, the information that is needed for government agencies to develop reasonable regulations. It is time for us to accept the need for regulation as a matter of course, like taxation, and to do our part to make that regulation sound and beneficial."

WELL, I'M NOT sure that all American businessmen are as ready as Browning willingly to replace "death and taxes" with "regulation and taxes," but there is certainly merit in his appraisal of current realities. More fragile, perhaps, is his hope that if business proves more forthcoming and cooperative, "government then has the obligation to drop its suspicious tone toward business."

What is undeniable is that businessmen have not effectively explained to the public that all benefits involve costs — and that the national policy bookkeeping should be double-entry, and informed. Plainly, nobody really gains from a bureaucratic maze of outdated laws, conflicting regulations and unexamined consequences.

Senator Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., introduced a bill last year to deal with this problem, another Congressional-sponsored report demanded clarification of our national growth policy, and President Carter clearly wants to do some massive streamlining of his own. But scant action has been taken, so Browning deserves at least half a cheer from the real "third parties" — you and me — who are waiting, and paying, in the wings.

U.S. dollar falls against mark

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The U.S. dollar fell further against the West German mark Friday and was mixed on other European markets. The price of gold rose.

After a firmer opening the dollar weakened during trading as the possibility of a realignment within the joint European monetary float this weekend contributed to unsettled conditions.

Dealers said the Deutsche Bundesbank and other European central banks apparently intervened only on a modest level to steady rates.

The dollar dropped to 2.2575 German marks in Frankfurt, down fr'm Thursday's 2.2645 close. It fell in Zurich to 2.3960 Swiss francs from 2.4038, in Paris to 4.8225 French francs from 4.8275, and in London, where the pound sold for $1.7197 at Friday's close compared with $1.7195 Thursday.

But the dollar held steady in Amsterdam at 2.4180 guilders and gained a fraction in Milan, to 881.55 lira from 881.45. The Brussels market was closed for a bank holiday.

In Tokyo the dollar finished the week on a firm note, with traders reacting favorably to the dollar's gain Thursday in Europe. It closed at 264.60 yen against 264.30 Thursday.

Open space, greenery contribute to success of unit development

Commercial development plans can reflect both economic and environmental concern, says Schaumburg developer William J. Walsh.

A balanced commercial development pla nfeaturing open space and success, Walsh said. He's president of greenery contributes to the project's the Walden Investment Corp., developer of the Walden residential and business center on Algonquin Road near Ill. Rte. 53.

Walsh recently announced plans for a third, five-story office building at the Walden site. Two new restaurants and a park are also included in current development plans.

WALDEN WAS PLANNED as a community where people can live and work, Walsh said. Lakes surrounded by walkways, tennis courts and swimming pools are among the amenities provided for tenants.

"Many executives live out here,"

William J. Walsh

Walsh said. "It's nice for them to have the feeling at the office, of being at home."

Parking space planning is one way to change the typical suburban landscape. Instead of buildings surrounded by a sea of parked autos, Walden developers planned parking on one side of the office building in the complex. Half the parking space for the Walden apartments and townhomes is underground.

"We said, let's do something never done in cities and rarely done in the suburbs. We want parking on one side, and a pleasant environment on the other," Walsh said of the office complex land utilization plan.

THE PLANNED UNIT development theme is the architectural movement of the future, adds Don Allen, an architect who serves as Walden Investment Corp. vice president. "You try to fit in a living, working environment where you can eliminate the need to drive to work and shopping areas."

The concept works well on a small scale, Walsh adds. He believes that future developments, which require substantial capital investment, will be launched with partners such as major insurance companies providing a big chunk of the financing, however.

Financing is a key to future commercial development in the Northwest suburban market, Walsh continued. Although the first two Walden office buildings are fully occupied, and the market for office space in the surrounding projects is generally tight, Walsh said he has no timetable for the remaining commercial development planned on the Walden site. Completion of the third, 80,000-square-foot office building is slated for February 1978.

Among the projects planned for eventual development at Walden are a half million square feet of office space, a 300-room hotel and conference center, additional restaurants, a small shopping center and 1,500 new residential units. The Entrust Management Co., a Walden affiliate, manages the 155-acre project and serves as leasing agent.

Worth of overpaid execs attacked

WASHINGTON — Last year, Henry Ford II, chairman, and Lee A. Iacocca, president, each earned $970,000 for their services to the Ford Motor Co. Close behind were Harold Geneen, chairman of the International Telephone and Telegraph Co., who was paid $846,398, and David J. Mahoney, of the Norton Simon conglomerate, who took home a total of $844,000 with the help of a $444,000 bonus.

There are too many presidents or board chairmen who earned anywhere from $300,000 to $600,000 to list here. The question that arises is: are Ford, Iacocca, Geneen, Mahoney and their counterparts in other corporate board rooms worth that much money in a single 12-month period?

John C. Baker, a former president of Ohio University and expert on corporate affairs, has written a fascinating article in the July-August Harvard Business Review. He makes the case that the reward system for top executives "has gotten out of hand."

IT IS TRUE, to be sure, that extra-high salaries also are paid to numerous stars in the sports and entertainment world. O.J. Simpson's pro football salary (forget the auto-rental commercial) is $700,000. The New York Yankees reportedly are paying Reggie Jackson $620,000 a year for four years and Catfish Hunter $750,000 a year for five years.

But at least, these are salaries that individuals won as a result of outstanding performance that put them ahead of the pack. Baker's devastating comment on corporate executive salaries is that "senior management echelon" has the major say in determining its own rewards.

This makes them "vulnerable to the charge" that they are wasting corporate funds, and in the process, making of themselves "the present-day royalty." He contends, and I think with validity, that public suspicion about business is deepened by the excessive salaries and bonuses top executives assign to themselves.

Baker doesn't object to good and substantial pay for top executives, or fringe-benefit plans that cover large groups of employees, including the top dogs. He's attacking the notion that fat payments to executives provide a motivation that is converted into greater company earnings. A study he made of 42 growth companies doesn't show that bonus-paying firms outperform nonbonus-paying companies.

Baker argues that public concern over corporate compensation may be "a more subtle" cause for mistrust of corporate society than charges of bribery, political payola and monopoly.

Stockholders can't do much more than make a lot of noise. Baker calls on boards of directors to take a more active role in setting the scales for top pay. Another possibility, he suggests, might be for a corporation to set up a "salary committee," chaired by an outsider, to make recommendations for changed practices.

Opinion-makers in the business community, who pretend to be bewildered by general public distrust of business and businessmen, should take Baker's advice seriously.

Bank trust allows freedom in wills

Moneywise

by Robert Edwards

My wife and I are octogenarians with separate wills that at either's death leave all to each other in a bank trust. I have misgivings about this and would prefer the money to be invested in a money-market fund. After both our deaths the estate will go to our children. What do you think of money-market funds?

— L. K.

Something appears to be missing in your proposal. The Tax Reform Act of 1976 changed the amount of an estate that can be transferred tax free at a first death and permits a higher marital deduction. You should first make sure your current wills reflect these changes. Second, if you set up a trust, a trustee can be empowered to direct the investment of assets for the benefit of the surviving spouse. You can direct in your will how the money is to be invested in a money-market fund perhaps. Whether a bank or someone else is the trustee, a well-drawn will should leave some freedom of action to act because a person can foresee the future only murkily and for a limited time ahead.

My husband and I are in our mid-20s. He is a graduate student working half time; I work full time. Where can we invest $1,000 until we are ready to buy a house? Should we take out a loan or use credit to establish our credit rating?

— S. S.

A credit union, as you suggest, is one place to accumulate cash for a down payment on a house. Or, since you would appear to know the timing of your husband's completion of his degree within certain limits, buy certificates of deposit for that time for a slightly better gain. You will need an established credit rating to finance the purchase of your house when you're ready. Borrowing from a bank, savings-and-loan association, or credit union with your savings as collateral can be a start on a credit rating. Or, contract to buy a car or some appliance — even though you have the cash. Then, pay back the money on schedule. Apply for and use several credit cards, but you need not finance purchases. Paying off credit card balances in full each month helps to establish credit at no cost.

POSTSCRIPT

In Moneywise for Feb. 23, 1977, the requirement for filing an income tax return if income exceeds $750 applies only if married couples file separately. A couple both over 65, as in the example, need not file a return unless income, earned and unearned, totals $5,100 or more. A surviving widow or widower meeting certain conditions need not file if income is less than $3,600. Singles over 65 need not file if income is less than $3,200.

Stocks make best gain since April

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks this week scored their best gain since mid-April in the heaviest trading of the year with the aid of better-than-expected earnings reports and government reports confirming a healthy economy.

The news spurred the smaller investor to buy. But professional and institutional investors reportedly were selling because they believed they foresaw an economic slowdown approaching the latter part of this year or the first part of next year.

Nevertheless, the Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 2.04 points last week, gained 17.47 points to 923.42, the best gain since it climbed 28.88 points the week ended April 15.

THE NEW YORK Stock Exchange common stock index rose 0.72 to 55.71 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, climbed 1.49 to 101.67.

Advances topped declines, 1,168 to 664, among the 2,111 issues crossing the composite tape.

The Big Board volume of 138,205,980 shares, up from the 94,543,120 during the four days last week, was the heaviest trading since 161,787,900 sharss changed hands the week ended Feb. 27, 1976. It was the ninth busiest week in NYSE history. Volume during the same week a year ago totaled 86,827,920 shares.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 159,440,560 shares, compared with 112,550,150 last week.

THg SECOND-quarter gross national product rose 6.4 per cent, confirming the economy's health. Although the figure was down from the revised 7.5 per cent in the 1st quarter, the advance was considered very strong.

Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal and the Congressional Budget Office said economic growth will continue at a healthy pace the rest of the year and through 1978, but at a slightly slower rate.

Active market gains 1.6 points

by FRANK W. SLUSSER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market Friday closed out its best week in three months and the busiest in more than a year with a modest gain despite profit taking pressures.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up and down in a narrow range most of the morning, finished with a gain of 1.64 points to 923.42, bringing its advance for the week to 17.47 points. That was the best weekly gain since it climbed 28.88 points the week ended April 15.

The New York Stock Exchange volume totaled 23,110,000 shares, down from the 26,880,000 traded Thursday.

The NYSE common stock index gained .07 to 55.71, the average price of a common share rose 3 cents and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, added .08 to 101.67.

Advances topped declines, 789 to 626, among the 1,888 issues crossing the composite tape. Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 26,210,150 shares, down from the 31,033,750 Thursday.

Editor's note . . .

The memory carried by a 16-year-old boy has become brick and mortar in Stonecroft, an Old World shopping village north of Milwaukee. Conceived by Wisconsin businessman Sid Stone, who emigrated from Germany as a boy, the village is patterned after the European village Stone remembers from his youth. Copy editor Clarisse Ritter talked with Stone and some of the shopkeepers and artists of Stonecroft. Page 3.

Ship ahoy, mateys! Climb aboard the good ship Endeavor and cast off your troubles. The 31-foot sloop, owned by American Youth Hostels in Chicago, plies the waters of Lake Michigan several times each week and anyone can pay the fee and climb on deck. Herald staff writer Laura Schmalbach joined the Endeavor crew on a Wednesday afternoon cruise. Her observations of the voyage appear on page 4.

Free lance travel writer Randy Mink journeys to the Far East to explore that magical city of the Orient — The British Crown Colony of Hong Kong. Page 9.

Stonecroft

It's a dream come true for Sid Stone, who brought a touch of his native German home to Wisconsin

by Clarisse Ritter

Sid Stone arrived in America in 1928 with $25 in his pocket and the ability to speak English. At 16 he had left behind his family and friends and the comfortable environment of a small German town where he lived above his father's store.

More than 40 years later, Stone again walks the red brick streets of a typical European village with its outdoor cafe and flower gardens. Stone is home — not in Germany, but in America — living in a community that existed only in his mind for almost half a century.

Home is Stonecroft, an Old World shopping village near Grafton, Wis., 20 miles north of Milwaukee on County Road C. Looking out over the wheat fields of Wisconsin just off Lake Michigan is Stonecroft. Here a group of shopkeepers and artists have established a community and environment unknown to most Americans.

Walking the only street in Stonecroft takes the visitor on a fairy tale trip amid characteristic stores. There are red brick streets and flower gardens . . . neatly weeded flower gardens. There are baskets of flowers hanging everywhere. Refinished church pews and wrought iron benches are placed along the one-block path for the weary shopper.

On Sundays, bands play in the gazebo and the community takes on a distinct European flavor.

"The Europe I remember is gone," Stone said matter-of-factly, fingering his glass of beer and casting his eyes upward. "In the small- or medium-size cities throughout the country though, you can still find that appeal. That is what I concentrated on in Stonecroft."

And the shopkeepers in Stonecroft seem to agree that Stone has captured that appeal.

For some, their lives have changed drastically since buying a piece of Stonecroft and moving in. To have a shop in Stonecroft, an artist or merchant must buy his store and live in the apartment above it. "I don't want to be a landlord," Stone said.

"This is a treasured life. Stonecroft has offered an entirely new way of life. The pressures of the times have changed here. This is a combination of making a living and living," Stonecroft's patriarch observed after four years in his new Old World home.

As Stone talks about his community and its artists, a mixture of paternal love and concern spills forth. "I want the shopkeepers to be happy here. If someone is unhappy, I'd help them leave. There is a great unity here. That helps make it special."

Stonecroft is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. The shops are closed on Monday.

"I am in the habit of going to sea whenever I begin to grow hazy about the eyes, and to be overconscious of my lungs." — Herman Melville, "Moby Dick."

Melville was on to something. He may have escaped to a whaling ship in the Atlantic instead of a Fiberglas sloop in Lake Michigan, but his prescription is just as valid today in Chicago as it was in Massachusetts, circa 1851.

For once you negotiate the traffic jams on Lake Shore Drive and the tangle of boats in Monroe Harbor, you forget about exhaust fumes and ozone advisories. You're sailing.

The fun starts the moment your tennis shoes squeak onto the deck of the 31-foot sloop, Endeavor. Owned by the Chicago branch of the American Youth Hostels, the boat gets a heavy workout from mid-May through October. But the pleasures of hoisting the mainsail and taking a turn at the tiller aren't limited to AYH members: any landlubber or wizened old salt can come aboard to learn the basics, test familiar skills, or just lean back and enjoy the view.

Non-members can plunk down $5.50 and join the Endeavor crew for a Wednesday evening sail from 7:30 to 10. For $8.50, you can heave ho at 8 a.m. on a Saturday or Sunday and return at 3 p.m. the same day. And for those with wanderlust, weekend trips to such exotic ports of call as Michigan City, St. Joe and Door County are offered from $45 to $65.

And then, there are Wednesday afternoons. According to veteran AYH skipper Herb Pinzke, the Endeavor's mid-week cruise attracts everyone from bronzed high school teachers on vacation to Michigan Avenue executives playing hooky for a day. It's easy to see why.

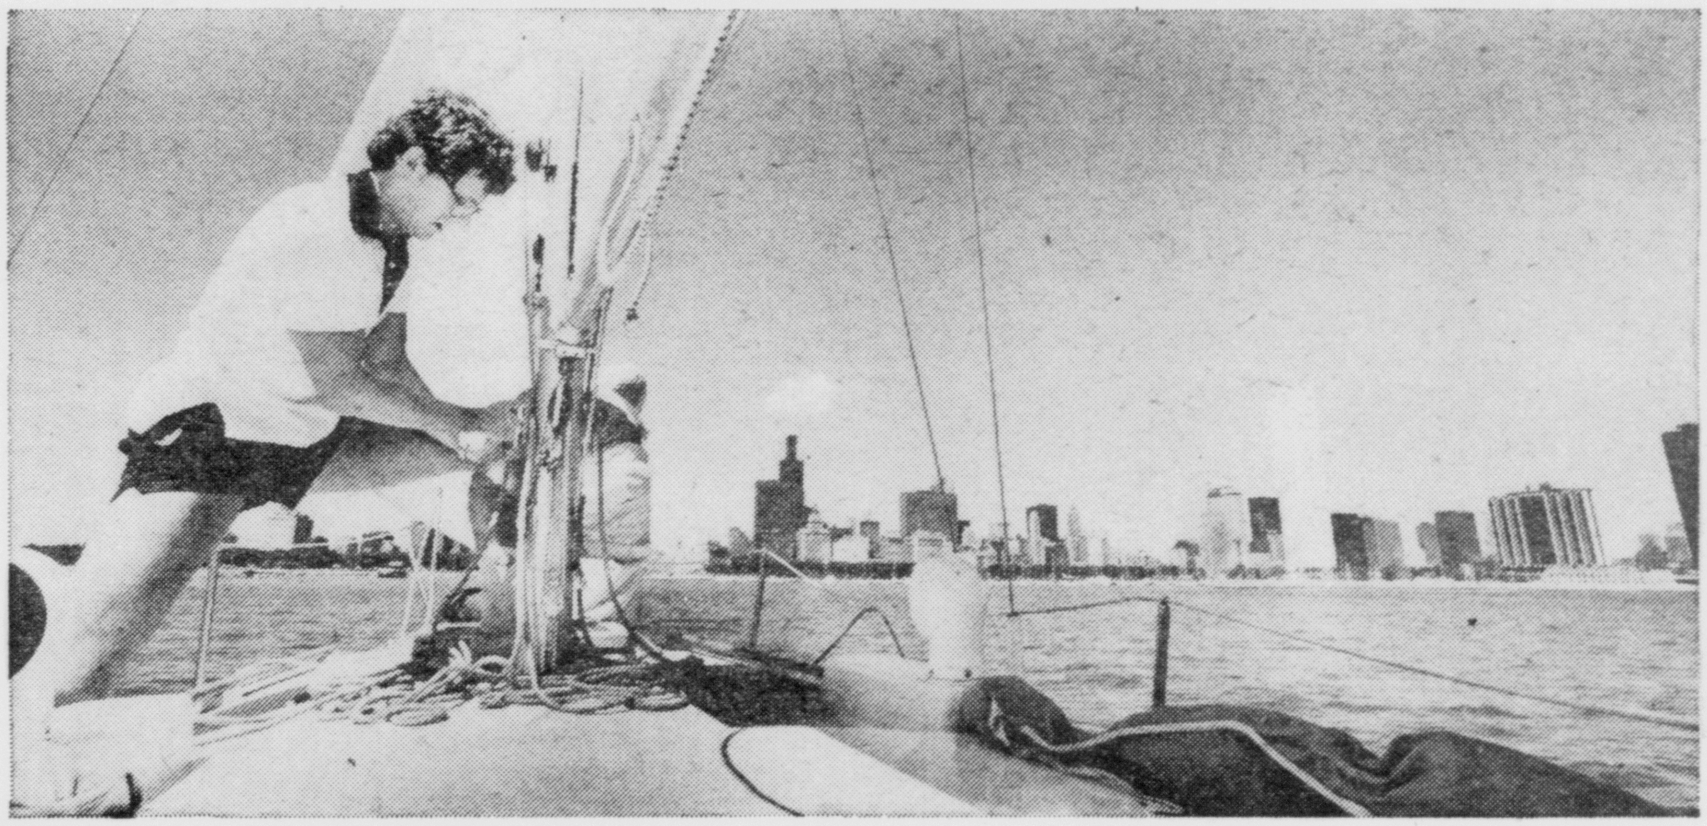
To a sailor who grew up with Sunfishes on a quiet Wisconsin lake, that first foray onto Lake Michigan was an undeniable thrill. I would have been impressed even if the weather offered no more than a drizzly overcast and a dead calm.

But there's something magical about the combination of a stiff northwesterly, cloudless sky and a view of the Chicago skyline that's unhampered by the weekend crush of sailboats and cabincruisers. It's sailing at its best, and $6.50 is a small price to pay.

Blowin' in the wind

Sailors are an odd bunch. United by a fascination for spinnakers and broad reaches, they run the gamut from adventuresome secretaries to leather-faced fishermen. Herb Pinzke, perhaps, is typical of many. Head of his own Chicago graphic design studio and a resident of Harbor Point (He can see the Endeavor moored in Monroe Harbor from his window), Pinzke is out on the water three or four times a week as one of about 150 AYH skippers. He doesn't talk much, and when he does, it's liable to be a short command on the order of "tighten that starboard cleat."

But Pinzke doesn't need words. His worn leather glove (protection against rope burn on a fast run), easy-fitting corduroys and swet-soaked bandanna attest to his professionalism and sheer love of the sport. And when he remarks that "it seems every seventh wave is bigger than the ones before it," you know he's probably right.



As vacationing businessman John Bly discovered, a leisurely sail up and down Chicago's shoreline isn't always relaxing.

An AYH crew member comes along to handle the mechanics of coming about and approaching the harbor, but everyone is encouraged to help with the outhaul or lend a hand below deck when the Endeavor is back at her mooring.

Although a few would-be sailors grow bored after the first 15 minutes ("some of them bring along books and forget they're on a boat," says Pinzke), most passengers take advantage of the chance to play old salt for a couple of hours. After all, few could do it on their own: a sloop like the Endeavor boasts a price tag of $20,000.

Seventh-grader Patty Shanahan of Evanston sees her first sail as an afternoon of adventure, not an escape from RTA tax hikes and too much overtime. But sailing is both.

It's also the joy of feelin an offshore breeze fill the sails and lift your hair. The fun of trailing a hook and sinker in the wake, fully aware that you won't catch anything, but too relaxed to care. The smell of alewives and a musty cabin, and the recognition that it beats a cab in the Loop by a long shot.

It's a thermos of coffee shared with strangers on a hot afternoon; the mesmerizing effect of watching the bow dip in and out of white-capped swells. No wonder the Endeavor's passengers seemed to smile in unison that day.

So you like roller coasters? You'll love sailing — if you have a gut of iron or a duffel bag stocked with dramamine. Of course, you won't always have to deal with these 15-20 m.p.h. breezes. Sometimes it's worse, says skipper Herb Pinzke . . . like the time a sudden thunderstorm caught the Endeavor a few miles offshore with several novices on board. After Pinzke lowered the sail and one lady lost her lunch, skipper and crew managed to limp through the 50 m.p.h. gusts intact. But Pinzke is the first to admit he wouldn't want that kind of high seas excitement again.

Stories by Laura Schmalbach

"It's hard to believe that while we're out here, there's a whole city full of people sitting at desks," said one of the Endeavor's first-time sailors, a wide grin breaking across his face.

He's right. From five miles out, it's tough to concentrate on anything more pressing than locating the Sears Tower and thumbing your nose at the poor souls who have to work on Wednesdays.

movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments. Films reviewed by Genie Campbell are rated excellent, four stars; good, three stars; fair, two stars; and poor, one star.

"Sinbad and the Eye of the Tiger" — That stalwart adventurer out of the Arabian Nights seeks the hand of a princess but battles supernatural creatures, prehistoric beasts and a sorceress before he claims it. The special effects are the thing, but the old-fashioned broad performing and storytelling add to the enjoyment. (G).

"New York, New York" — He is a selfish saxophone player, she is a bright young singer in the big band era immediately following World War II. It is an ill-fated love story but director Martin Scorcese rarely allows the jazz-driven pace to falter. Great performances by Robert De Niro and Liza Minnelli among cardboard sets and golden glows that evote the fashions and mood of the 1940s. ★ ★ ★

"Star Wars" — Director George Lucas (American Graffiti") pulled out all stops in mounting this space fantasy about intergalactic warfare, and the dazzling filmmaking, technical wizardry and rousing adventure make for one of the most spectacular entertainments of this or any other year. Not a heavy, heady "2001" trip, it aims to entertain, and the sky is the limit. (PG). ★ ★ ★ ★

"Sorcerer" — Big, colorful, but impersonal suspense thriller about four outcasts trucking nitroglycerine through a South American jungle. Roy Scheider gives a strong performance, the visual effects are vividly convincing, and the tension groans to hair-raising proportions. But director William Friedkin forgets to clearly unravel the story as he manipulates your pulse. (PG). ★ ★

ARLINGTON — Arlington Heights — 255-2125 — "Sorcerer" (PG).
CATLOW — Barrington — 381-0777 — "The Eagle Has Landed" (PG).
MOUNT PROSPECT CINEMA — Mount Prospect — 392-7070 — Theater 1: "Rescuers" (G); Theater 2: "Star Wars" (PG).
DES PLAINES — Des Plaines — 824-5253 — "Black Sunday" (R).
ELK GROVE — Elk Grove — 593-2255 — "Sinbad and the Eye of the Tiger" (G).
GOLF MILL — Niles — 296-4500 — Theater 1: "New York, New York" (PG); Theater 2: "A Bridge Too Far" (PG); Theater 3: "Other Side of Midnight" (R).
MEADOWS — Rolling Meadows — 392-9898 — "Shadow Hawk" (G); "Sinbad and the Eye of the Tiger (G).

Stonecroft:

mind when there was nothing but my description and a piece of paper," he said.

Whether the motivation was that of trust in Sid Stone and his idea, or whether just simple good business ("We have a modest tax rate and can depreciate our homes because of the business," Stone said.) the concept of Stonecroft appears to be working and working well.

"Each year we improve in business and we have a lot of fun," Stone said. "Next, I want to build a live theater. We can't miss if we make a cultural contribution to the entire Milwaukee area. If the budget is within our reach, we'll have a live theater. I look to the future of Stonecroft, not the present. We'll meet the challenge. I like this idea of a cultural contribution to the area. I can feel it in the air. Things are happening."

Things are happening, in part, because of the community and the people who live in it. The backgrounds of the artists and shopkeepers vary widely.

Joe Stuekerjuergen, owner of Majo Arts, is a retired mink breeder. He and his wife, Mae, sell original oil paintings by Stuckerjuergen. He also paints on consignment.

Veronica and Eileen Burns own Art Ltd. Both are teachers who invested in Stonecroft because of the lifestyle it offered. Art Ltd. offers original handcrafted custom art objects and gifts including macrame and stitchery. Oil painting restoration and cleaning is also available at their store.

Charlie House, owner of Nature House, is a retired newspaper reporter. His is a new kind of shop in which everything is natural including art objects made of stones and bones. Neighboring shopkeepers say the greatest thing offered at Nature House is a talk with Charlie, who knows "just about everything."

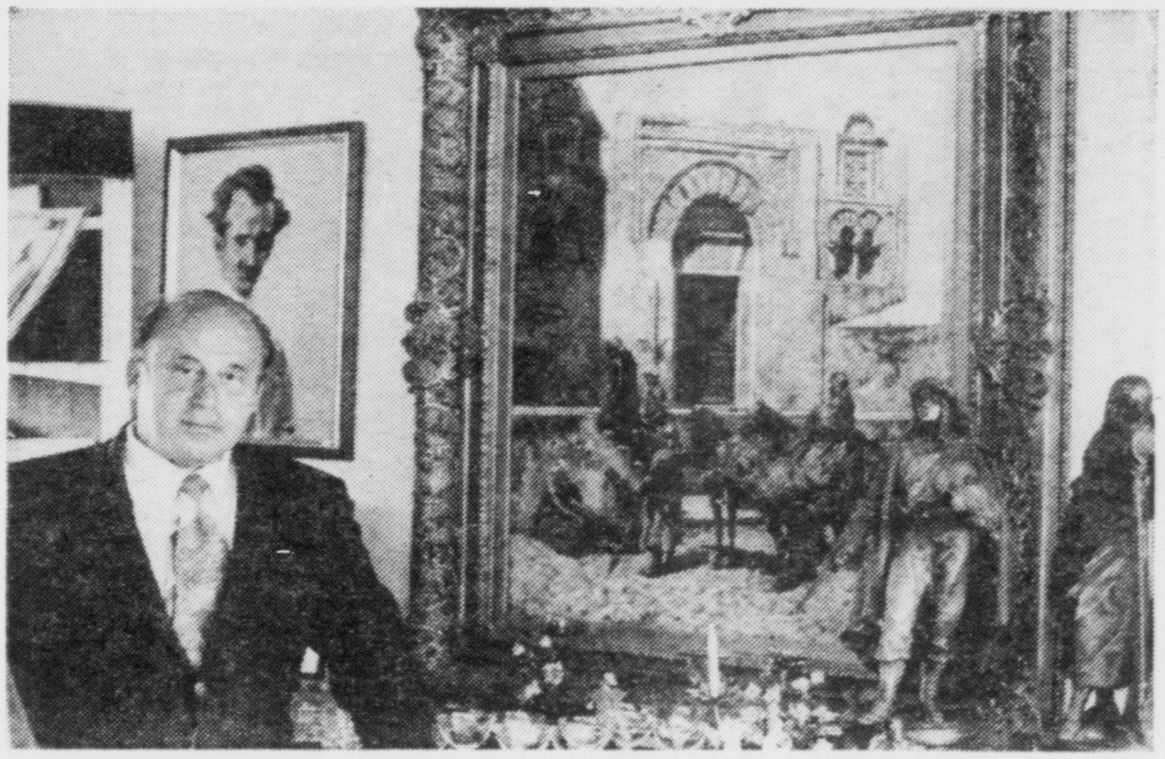
The June Bug Shop, owned by June and George Greasby, specializes in antiques and handcrafted gifts. June said she came to Stonecroft because Sid Stone was her neighbor in Whitefish Bay, a Milwaukee suburb. "When I heard about his idea I thought, 'wouldn't that be fun'."

June sports a mischievous grin when she tells visitors she has no special artistic skill. "I sell on consignment and handle the merchandise of about 200 craftsmen," she said. Except for imported soap and antiques, every item sold in her store is handcrafted including crocheted bedspreads and gingham sunbonnets.

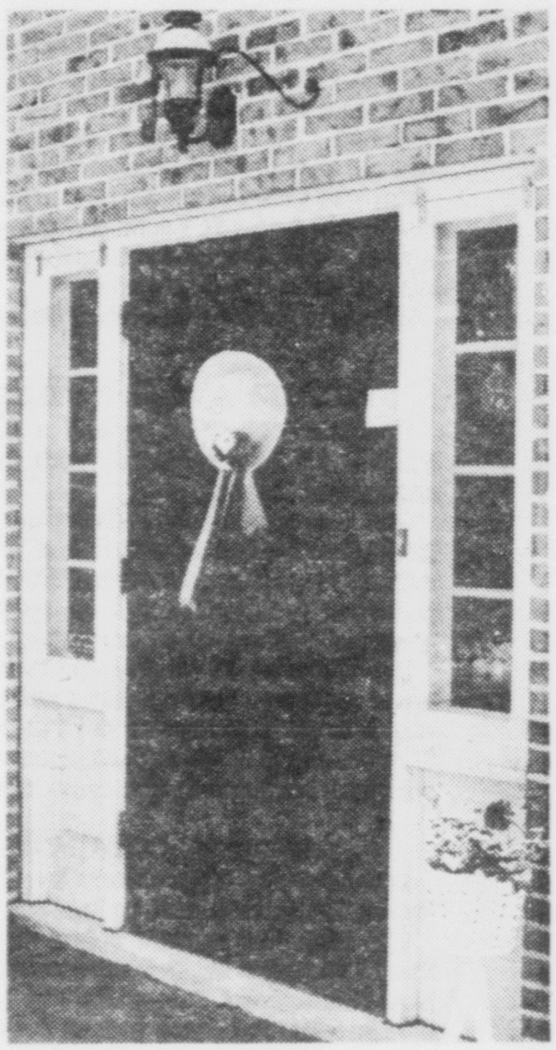
Stonecroft also features three special import stores. Caravanserai is an outlet of imports from Turkey and the Middle East. Husfliden sells Scandinavian imports and Steels of Stonecroft is an outlet for Oriental imports.

Also at the picturesque shopping village is Bells and Music Boxes, a tinkling shop dealing exclusively in bells and music boxes from around the world. The Old World community also is home for The Bookshop of Stonecroft, Sail 'N Rail, a model ship builder's dream, a flower store, a jewelry shop, a photography studio, a wood specialists shop and the Wooden Nob, featuring antique and primitive furniture. Dorothy Rinehart, owner of the Wooden Nob, proudly observed, "I probably have it to sell because you threw it away."

One of Stonecroft's most unique shops is Rue-Mahj Unlimited. A virtual treasure chest of items, the owners, Rosemary and George Henshaw, joke about the rummage available in their browser's paradise. Rosemary, however, is a doll collector and speaks maternally about her "babies." George buys and repairs antique clocks and watches to sell at Rue-Mahj. So bountiful is their supply of merchandise that is has spilled out into the garage making a trip through the store a real adventure for the bargain hunter.



Sid Stone, himself an artist, is also a collector of antique prints and original paintings. Below, a decorated door and basket of flowers beckon the shopper to visit the store.



An easy-going atmosphere prevails at the outdoor cafe at Bobo's Clocktower Restaurant.

Coming to Stonecroft this summer is a wine and cheese store and a crepe restaurant.

The only three other stores at Stonecroft, Bobo's Clocktower Restaurant, The Gallery Candy Shop and Jacquelyn's have a special place in Sid Stone's heart.

Jacquelyn's is a boutique billed "for today's active, curious and adventurous woman." It is owned by Stone's daughter-in-law, Jacquelyn.

Bobo's Clocktower Restaurant is owned and operated by Stone's son, Bobo, and his wife, Ann.

Stone chuckles when he talks about Bobo's. The restaurant has an easy atmosphere with an outdoor cafe, especially popular with shoppers. There is entertainment at the restaurant from 11:30 a.m. - 2 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

Bobo's is a place a weary husband can find solace and a drink to calm his nerves while his wife combs through Stonecroft's shops. Bobo's is a place for "pleasant pubbing."

Towering high atop Bobo's is the clocktower. The four-sided face of the clock was saved from destruction when the Schlitz Brewing Co., decided to destroy an old building in Milwaukee.

Stone spotted the clock as workers were preparing to tear down the plant. He called the beer company's executives, made arrangements to spare the clocktower and today it greets visitors to Stonecroft.

The Gallery Candy Shop is Sid and Shanah Stone's shop. They have combined their special skills and interests into one store.

Shanah's candy-making ability has lured more than one would-be dieter off the straight and narrow. She has built her business on the reputation of her home-made fudge and toffee. She also sells Fanny Farmer candy.

Shanah's craft makes up the candy portion of the store while Sid's special talent shares the abode.

Stone, himself an artist, has an antique print collection which he sells along with his own cartoon selections.

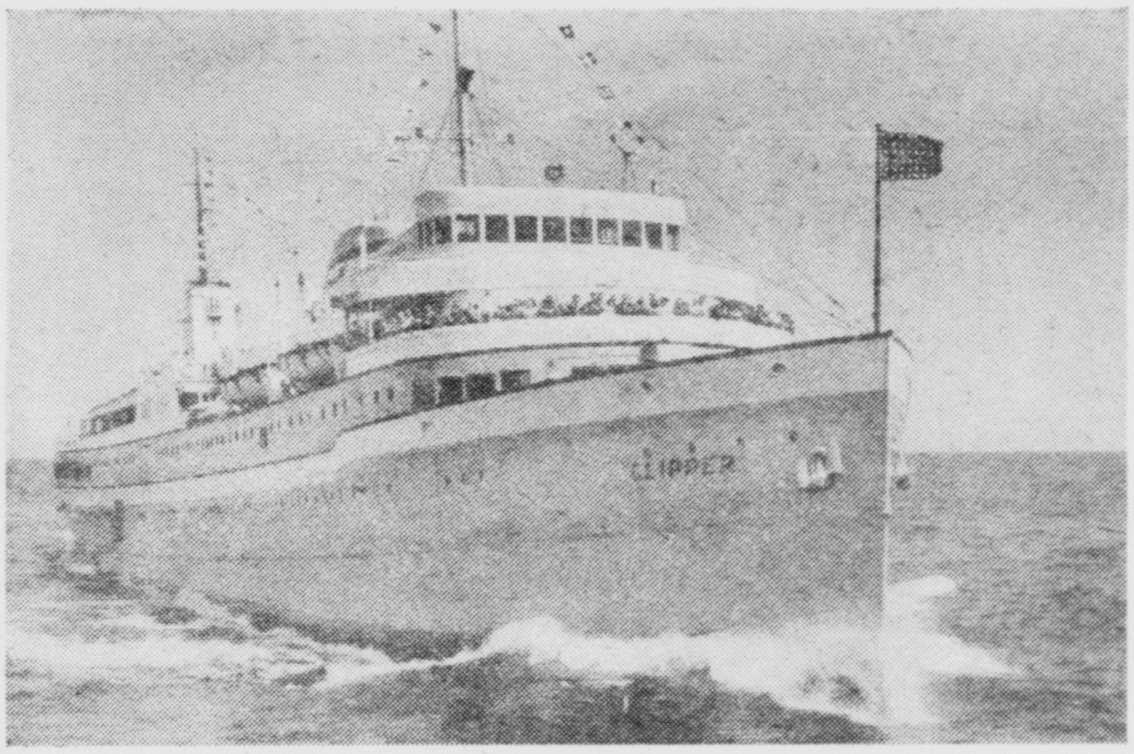
Perhaps the key to Stonecroft is found in Sid Stone's gallery among his work and the dusty volumes of antique prints.

"I've seen many executives in modern times, because of retirement, end their careers. These are able bodied people with hobbies and I wanted them to have an opportunity to do what they want," Stone said, explaining his reasons for building an Old World shopping community in the days of indoor shopping malls and giant discount stores.

"Money isn't really important. Nobody is going to get rich at Stonecroft. Some can do very well and are doing very well, and with that idea, I went ahead and built Stonecroft. There is none like it in the country. It is a social experience."

Standing among handcolored medieval prints from the 1860s, and 1821 etchings after David Deuchar, Stone observed, "I don't care if they are bought or not."

With that, the man who came to the New World as a youth summed up much about his idea for an Old World community in the midst of 20th Century America. Stonecroft is a business but it is also his home.§



Cruises will be offered on the S.S. Clipper beginning July 28 from Navy Pier.

S.S. Clipper returning to Great Lakes July 28

The steamship S.S. Clipper is scheduled to begin excursion cruises July 28 from the newly renovated Navy Pier in Chicago.

The last Great Lakes passenger ship of its class still in existence, the Clipper, known as "Queen of the Lakes," originally sailed with her two sister ships, "Tionesta" and "Octorara," from Buffalo to Duluth. In 1941 she was converted from a passenger and package freight vessel to a passenger and auto ferry. In this capacity, she provided cross-lake service between Milwaukee and Muskegon until 1970 when she began a seven-year "r & r" hitch.

She has now undergone extensive renovation to become a recreational attraction with most of the amenities of a first-class resort. Owned by the Great Lakes Transit Co., she will sail several times daily from Chicago.

Her facilities include a restaurant, cocktail lounge, movie theater, game room, children's playroom, dancing with live orchestras, piano bar, beer garden, snack shop and open decks for strolling and relaxing.

The S.S. Clipper will be open to the public on a first-come first-served basis. She also will be available by advance reservation for parties of 50 or more and charter groups of 500.

Passenger fares will range from $4 to $9, depending on the time of day and day of the week of the sailing. On holidays fares will be slightly higher. Children will be admitted for half fare.

Sailings are set from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., 3 p.m. - 6:30 p.m., 7:30 p.m. - 11:30 p.m. daily and from 12:30 a.m. to 3 a.m. Fridays and Saturdays. The 12:30 a.m. cruise also is available Sunday through Thursday by advance group booking.

For information regarding group and charter rates, call 372-3905.

New hours for amusement park

The old Chicago Amusement Park and shopping mall announces extended hours for the summer months.

Through Labor Day, the amusement park will open at 10 a.m. daily. Closing time will be, Sunday through Thursday at 10 p.m., Friday and Saturday at midnight.

Visitors to the park will have the opportunity to view three performances each of the Old Chicago International Circus and the Charlie Baffle Mystery Show. Old Chicago is at the intersection of I-55 and Route 53, Bolingbrook.

Two religious programs at Grant Park

Grant Park's summer concert series continues with two religious choral programs, Antonio Vivaldi's "Gloria," written around 1700, and Francis Poulenc's "Stabat Mater," written in 1950, offering a study in contrasts between baroque and modern music at 8 p.m. Wednesday and Friday.

Music by Cole Porter, one of America's most prolific composers of popular music, will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, July 30 and 31. Norman Leyden, conductor of the Seattle Symphony Pops Concerts, will make his debut at the evening concerts.

All programs are free at the Petrillo Music Shell in Grant Park.

'Animals of the Pharaohs' at Brookfield Zoo

Brookfield Zoo has opened a new self-guided tour, "Animals of the Pharaohs," in conjunction with the Field Museum's "Treasure of Tutankhamun" exhibit.

The tour ranges throughout the zoo and features more than a dozen Brookfield Zoo species that had an important place in ancient Egyptian culture. Among them were the "Nile horse," known to us as the hippopotamus, regarded by Egyptians of long ago as a raider of crops and the embodiment of danger and the cobra, ancient symbol of power and immortality.

Zoo visitors will receive an "Animals of the Pharaohs" booklet as they enter the zoo gate; the booklet and the self-guided tour are free. Zoo admission is in effect every day but Tuesday, a free day. Other days admission is $1.50 for those 12 through 65 years of age; children 6 through 11 and adults over 65 are admitted for 50 cents. Children under six are admitted free.

Logging competition at Hayward, Wis.

Lumberjacks from around the globe are preparing for the lumberjack world championships to be held July 29-31 at Hayward, Wis.

The three-day loggers' sports competition attracts working lumberjacks from the major logging centers of the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania. This year they'll be testing their skills in the old-time logging camp games before the television cameras as ABC-TV's "Wide World of Sports" returns to Lumberjack Bowl to tape the games for a national broadcast.

Garden walk in Lincoln Park area

The North Dearborn Assn.'s annual garden walk and heritage festival will be from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, July 31. The walk will extend along Dearborn Street and its side streets from Lincoln Park to Division Street. A $1.50 donation is requested, with children under 12 years old admitted free.

More than 30 private gardens will be open for public viewing. The Chicago Festival Orchestra, conducted by Raymond Rosenkranz, will give a public concert and Bill Snyder and his trio will entertain. Refreshments will be available in the courtyard of St. Chrysostom's Church, where there will also be carillon concerts throughout the day.

Explore 'other worlds' at planetarium

This summer the Adler Planetarium is offering a journey throughout the universe by way of the planetarium's Sky Shows, titled "Ticket to Other Worlds," in the multi-screen Universe Theater and in the giant domed Sky Theater.

The informative two-part show continues through Aug. 1, taking visitors on a space tour to Mars, Jupiter, alien planets, multiple sun systems, whirling galaxies and the exploding universe.

Shows can be seen daily at 11 a.m., 1, 2, 3, 4, and 7:30 p.m. at the planetarium, 1300 Lake Shore Dr., Chicago. Adult admission is $1.50; children 6 to 17 years old, 75 cents; senior citizens with identification are admitted free. Children under 6 are welcome to the exhibits, but not admitted to the theaters.

Hong Kong, the exotic port of the Far East

To absorb the complexity of this British crown colony, you begin with small chopstick-fuls

by Randy Mink

HONG KONG — After the long flight from Chicago, your plane finally touches down about 10 p.m. and in minutes a taxi whisks you to the ritzy Sheraton-Hong Kong Hotel, where your room commands a dazzling panorama of the twinkling harbor below.

Few vistas in the world compare with Hong Kong's waterfront, especially when it's floodlit at night by strips of blue and red emanating from neon signs on Hong Kong Island, an outcropping of rock stacked with high-rises. The shimmering ribbons, interrupted by small boats, glitter like Christmas tinsel.

Lying on your bed or sipping a mai tai in the hotel's Sky Lounge, by day or by night, you can follow the sampans, barges and fishing junks that criss-cross the water. Ports are always exciting, but just being in the Orient injects an exotic touch.

The Far East, let's quickly add, is not all that "far" away. With the number of low-cost charter fights available these days, more and more Americans can afford a trip to Hong Kong. Surprise your friends and relatives by announcing your departure for this most exquisite of destinations. Return with eye-opening color slides, tailor-made suits, jade baubles and a list of favorite Chinese restaurants.

Randy Mink is a free lance travel writer from Des Plaines.

Two-week package plans, including twelve overnights in Hong Kong and roundtrip flight from Chicago, cost just under $900. A flight alone runs less than $700. You can stay in Hong Kong the whole time or hop over to places like Thailand, Japan and Korea.

It would be easy to devote the entire two weeks to Hong Kong, so diversified are its attractions. Multi-faceted Hong Kong, moreover, takes a few days getting used to.

Away from your air-conditioned, plushly-appointed hotel retreat, your senses are assaulted — absolutely overwhelmed — by the streams of motor traffic, the glut of Chinese signs and the swarms of humanity jamming the streets. Seas of people, including whole families, flood the sidewalks, chattering away in a strange tongue. New construction everywhere adds to the noise level. Exploding with life, Hong Kong is one gigantic Chinatown, or an Oriental version of New York City.

This high-powered tempo, along with the variety of sights and shopping opportunities, can leave the first-time visitor reeling, fearing he doesn't have enough time, enough money nor enough film to experience the riches of Hong Kong — a photographer's delight.

His friend responded: "Ah, that's the true picture of Hong Kong — people getting in your way."

Besides all the taxis, trams and double-decker buses, you'll see an occasional rickshaw, a dying mode of transport. What a great picture, though, to convince friends that "Old China survives." So, when I spotted a sprinting rickshaw driver pulling a local man down the street, I chased him nearly a mile until I got tired of jostling people and gave up. That's Hong Kong for you. (Try taking a picture of a parked rickshaw driver and you'll be angrily shooed away.)

To absorb the complexity of this British crown colony neighboring the southernmost tip of the People's Republic of China, you must begin with small chopstick-fuls. Then, the more you get under its skin, the more exciting it becomes.

For relief from the urban bustle of the main island and the Kowloon peninsula (location of the new hotel district across the harbor), seek out the peace and quiet of Hong Kong's deluxe hotels and restaurants, outer islands and picturesque farmlands. Or lose yourself shopping — in gleaming hotel arcades, multi-level shopping malls and simple street markets.

Though Hong Kong has not escaped world-wide inflation, bargains still abound and the selection is vast. You can save a bundle on duty-free radios, cameras and watches. Made-to-order suits ($90 for a three-piece English wool suit) and Chinese antiques and handicrafts are other good buys. In the stores which specialize in China imports, you can get porcelain, scrolls, bamboo wall hangings, silks, linens and woven baskets, not to mention canned Chinese foods and beverages, all at modest prices. For less than $40, I bought an abacus, some scrolls, panda knick-knacks, lambskin rugs, bamboo-leaf wine, toy junks and more.

Some visitors literally spend half their waking hours in Hong Kong shopping — it's the supermarket of the Orient. Jewelry accounts for 20 per cent of the average tourist's shopping expenditures. Since few shops accept American credit cards, bring plenty of cash.

The ladies can easily kill a morning haggling with vendors at the Canton Road Jade Market, where the sidewalks are choked with tourists, local shoppers and wholesalers inspecting jade necklaces, bracelets, brooches and chunks of the uncut green stone.

For Old China flavor, check out the narrow "Ladder Streets" that wind up the hillside on the island's commercial district. Here you'll see people eating and cooking on the street, chickens hopping around, meat and poultry hanging from hooks and some pretty cramped conditions. The people here seem to live centuries apart from the shiny high-rise apartments that punctuate the skyline.

For a birdseye view of Hong Kong street life, take a tram ride and peek into stores and workshops. To get a glimpse of upper-floor homes, grab a seat on the top level but watch out for the low ceiling. You pay a mere 7 cents to clackety-clack your way through a fascinating slice of Hong Kong.

Hong Kong:

Since Hong Kong is British, many people speak English and signs are bilingual. On ferries and trams it says "Beware of pickpockets." Don't be surprised to find yourself ambling down a Queen's Road or Queen Victoria Street. Cosmopolitan Hong Kong also has its American side — more than twenty McDonald's hamburger outlets.

You'll find many hotels of international standard, especially on the Kowloon side. They serve American as well as Chinese dishes. In hotel coffee shops you can have your bacon and eggs or pancakes and syrup for breakfast and a cheeseburger for lunch. Of course, most visitors want to eat Chinese food, but if you can't handle chopsticks, a knife and fork are always there. Only one man in our group refused to even try chopsticks, but he always got more food than I did because I was so slow in snaring my share from the family-style spreads.

The ratio of hotel staff to guests is greater than in most other parts of the world. Service is snappy and personal. It's startling to walk down a hall and confront a bellman who chirps, "Good morning, Sir."

The sparkling Sheraton, less than three years old but already a landmark, has bullet-shaped glass elevators that slide up the exterior wall and inside the atrium lobby. The 922 lavish rooms come with private bath, radio and color television. Singles range from $27 to $48; doubles run $34 to $53; and suites start at $80. The Star Ferry to the island is just five minutes away. Other top hotels in the vicinity are the Holiday Inn, Hyatt Regency and Peninsula.

This hotel and entertainment district, called Tsim Sha Tsui, glows with the red neon Chinese characters on the nightclub marquees and the bare light bulbs that illuminate sidewalk shops and food stalls. Supper clubs and topless joints abound. Western rock music blares into the streets, and bar girls grab male passersby, purring, "Buy me a drink." Signs in English declare "Hostesses and Escorts at Your Disposal" and "Sexy Topless Barmaids."

To escape the urban turmoil and get a fresh perspective of Hong Kong, you can spend a day touring the farmlands and villages of the New Territories for a look at China's past. (Only 12 per cent of Hong Kong is urban.) This sector is located between Kowloon and the Chinese border. Though stores are well-stocked with Coca-Cola, ice cream and modern appliances, buffaloes pull the plows and workers in broad-brimmed straw hats till the rice paddies.

Most full-day tours visit Lokmachau Lookout, from which you can scan the countryside of China which is nothing spectacular. Vendors at the lookout sell cheap souvenirs and a crinkly-faced, toothless woman in traditional Chinese dress cackles, "Picture, one dollar."

The New Territories also comprise 235 islands in the South China Sea. These isles (few are inhabited) offer small, unspoiled valleys where peasants work vegetable farms. Quiet beaches and simple fishing villages add to the tranquility.

Our group took a nearly empty, air-conditioned ferry to Chau Cheung, where we wandered down traffic-free alleys, poking our heads into doorways where people were busily engaged in such cottage industries as making baskets and toy airplanes.

Lantau Island, Twice the size of Hong Kong Island, has only 15,000 residents. Visitors can tour Po Lin Monastery, with its elaborately decorated temples and panormaic views at 2,400 feet. Vegetarian meals are served in the main dining hall, and it is possible to stay overnight ($5) in a spartan bunkhouse. At the nearby tea plantation, visitors are welcome to sample many different brews and watch the tea-picking. §

Travel information for Hong Kong

GETTING THERE: The new Advance Booking Charters (ABCs) cost half the price of regularly scheduled flights.

Orient Charter Tours, for example, offers a roundtrip two-week flight (air fare only) from Chicago to Hong Kong for $639. Creative World sells air and twelve overnights for $849 from Chicago. Both plans allow you to organize your own time but you can choose optional sightseeing tours — not only to places in Hong Kong, but to Thailand, Japan and Korea.

Charters to Hong Kong leave Chicago only on selected dates — this year, Sept. 30 and Nov. 11. The number of charters departing from Los Angeles is greater. L.A.-Hong Kong flights start at $499 roundtrip, $649 with hotel. Such flights must be booked 30 to 60 days in advance. Contact a travel agent for details.

ENTRY: American visitors need a passport — but visas are not required for stays of less than one month. All visitors must hold a smallpox vaccination certificate.

POPULATION. Of the 4.3 million inhabitants, 98 per cent are Chinese. Official languages are Chinese and English, with Cantonese the most widely spoken dialect. English is spoken in hotels, restaurants and shops. Hong Kong is a British colony.

TEMPERATURE. Seasons correspond with those in North America, with the coolest days in winter and spring, mid-December through May, when temperatures average 59 to 70 degrees. Summer temperatures often reach into the 90s, with high humidity and lots of rain. Autumn, the best season, lasts from mid-September to early December. Fall temperatures average 74 degrees.

CURRENCY. Five Hong Kong dollars are equal to about $1 U.S. Travelers checks and foreign currency can be exchanged at banks, shops and hotels — but storefront money changers give the best rates.

INFORMATION: Free brochures are available from the Hong Kong Tourist Association, 333 N. Michigan Ave., Suite 218, Chicago 60601 (Phone: 782-8191). — R.M.

America's search for roots is boosting foreign travel

Call it "Roots Fever."

Blame it on last year's Bicentennial. Or just see it as part of the growing interest in one's identity and family history — an interest that's skyrocketed so in the past few years that some experts now call genealogy the nation's No. 3 hobby, after stamp and coin collecting.

In greater numbers than ever before, native-born Americans are traveling abroad to visit the "old country" they've never seen. Americans of the second, third and even tenth generation are combining foreign travel with amatuer genealogy. Not content simply to tour ruins and museums, cathedrals and castles, they are poring over ancient church records and walking narrow old-world streets in search of their ancestral roots in Germany, England, Italy, Japan, Africa, South America.

The travel industry isn't ignoring this interest in "the other homeland." Pan American World Airways, for example, is in the midst of an advertising campaign encouraging people to "discover the second heritage that most Americans have." This spring, the airline printed more than 200,000 copies of a "second heritage" brochure for free distribution by its own ticket offices and some 9,000 travel agents. The brochure offers tips on starting a genealogy search and a short list of beginner's guide books. So popular has the giveaway been that Pan Am is getting set for a second printing. (The brochure is also available free by mail from Pan Am's Heritage, P.O. Box 200, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11232)

Abroad, British genealogists are being visited by a rising number of Americans seeking help in family research — so much so that Debrett's, a 200-year-old London research company and genealogical publisher, has just established an office in New York. According to Frank Sypher, who is directing the new American headquarters, Debrett's plans to link up with travel organizations and arrange personalized genealogical itineraries for Americans of British ancestry.

Before you fly off on a roots-finding trip overseas, however, it's important to do your homework.

First, methodically ask all of the older generation of your family about their parents and grandparents, noting names, birth and death dates, hometowns and marriages.

Next, move to written records in the family's possession. You may be surprised by the informal "archives" you can uncover: a family Bible, diaries, scrapbooks and photo albums, boxes of letters, wills, address books. The luggage tag on an old trunk may tell the year the family moved from one city to another.

Then investigate outside sources: church registries, town clerk's offices, tombstone markings, old newspapers and city directories in the local library. You may want to consult genealogical collections, such as those operated by the Mormon Church. The main Mormon library is in Salt Lake City, but there are more than 200 regional branches with access to the central collection. (The church's files are not limited to Mormons, and anyone may use the libraries free. Mormon churches are listed in telephone directories under "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.")

Everywhere, search for facts about jobs, hobbies and other bits of information as well as the basic names and dates. You may learn that a grandfather's grandmother was of royal blood; or you may uncover a horse thief in the family line. Be prepared to accept both kinds of information.

Aim to double-check as many facts as you can. Memories — and even written records — can be faulty.

Sooner or later, you will reach an ancestor who came here from a foreign land. At this point, the federal government's National Archives in Washington, D.C. can be very helpful: there, you can check not only census and county birth records back to 1790, and military records of the 18th and 19th centuries, but passenger lists for ships entering U.S. ports for many years of peak immigration. A regional branch of the National Archives is found in Chicago.

With help from guidebooks or a local genealogical society, you can begin writing to foreign city and church offices to learn what records you may hope to find on your visit. Often it will be helpful to contact a genealogical society in or near the town; for a small fee you should be able to hire an English-speaking researcher who can guide you through the paperwork as well as the streets of your own personal "old country."

You may find the family house of two centuries ago still standing. You may find the family plot in a long-filled cemetery. Or, finding only roadblocks in your research, you may have to be satisfied with roaming the streets once walked by someone who helped make you what you are.

Algoma has a variety of summer attractions

Algoma, Wis., on the shore of Lake Michigan, has been one of the main ports for Great Lake's fishermen, but travelers to this area of the state now have an interesting variety of activities on land to choose from, too.

The attractions in Algoma, a village of 4,000 in Kewaunee County (just south of the Door County peninsula) include a surprising "living museum" dedicated to the Great Lakes; a German-heritage winery; a nearby state bicycle trail; an historic railroad; a charming doll museum with a population of "little people" nearly the size of Algoma; and several fine gift shops.

The museum is the Living Lakes Exposition on the Algoma lakefront just a bit north of the harbor entrance. It features displays of commercial fishing gear, a tour aboard an early 1930s fishing boat with on-board narration and films of the boat's history and the techniques of the commercial fisherman, and displays of hundreds of artifacts salvaged from ships which sank in the Great Lakes from the mid-1850s and later.

But the museum also incorporates sophisticated electronic presentations which keep visitors intrigued and wondering what type of display they will see next. An animated, 3-D talking figure of Dick Harris, a veteran and well-known fishery and wildlife official, welcomes visitors to the museum, and later in the tour another full-size, animated figure of "Gordon Quill" — a traditional Great Lakes fisherman — chats amiably about the history of the lakes.

There are also displays to warm the hearts of modern sport fishermen with a display of mounted Great Lakes fish, several of them past or current national and state record holders, and exhibits of sports fishing, water quality, marine safety, and fish preparation and cooking.

Some of the historic displays include a double steering wheel recovered from the wreck of the St. Albans which went down in 1881, table settings, locks, sailor's pocket knives and rigging equipment from other wrecks.

On the same grounds as the exposition is Mrs. Gray's Dolls Museum with more than 3,200 "residents" from various nations, historical eras, and constructed of a variety of materials.

Wandering through Mrs. Gray's collection one sees old favorites such as Raggedy Ann & Andy, Gibson girls, the Fisk Tire boy, Davy Crockett, a teddy bear or two, delicate china dolls, little sailors in Navy blue outfits, Honest Abe, a grinning Teddy Roosevelt, Santa Claus, and, of course, kewpie dolls.

A short distance across the Algoma channel is the venerable von Stiehl winery where tours are free. Operated by Dr. C.W. Stiehl, the winery is the oldest in Wisconsin, and is located in the former Ahnapee Brewery building which, until a hops blight in 1880, brewed beer. The product now is wine — dry and sweet apple and cherry wines — which may be leisurely sampled in a dignified tasting room with cherry wood tables and art objects from the Franco-Prussian war era. The underground fermenting rooms, with thick walls and archways, hold the large vats, and are as fascinating as the explanations by the guides on the creation of one of mankind's most ancient libations.

The departure point for taking a ride on an old railroad coach to the village of Casco Junction is right in Algoma, alongside the Ahnapee River. The engine pulling the coach is an Ingersoll Rand diesel, an interesting change from the traditional steam locomotives on most historic railroads. The train ride winds through some of eastern Wisconsin's most pleasant, rural country, and can provide children and adults with a glimpse of travel before the interstate system and excellent secondary road systems were commonplace.

The Ahnapee Trail is one leg of the Wisconsin Bikeway. The state began purchasing abandoned railway right-of-way a few years ago and converting them into bike trails. By removing the tracks and ties, rebuilding the wooden bridges, and laying down a rideable surface of crushed gravel, the state created superior bike trails unrivaled across the nation. The Ahnapee Trail (Algoma was originally known as Ahnapee) provides fifteen excellent biking miles, or good terrain for hikers and bird watchers, too.

Algoma is located on state highway 42 about 110 miles north of Milwaukee. It's about a 4-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs.

Auto-train has summer run through Labor Day

Auto-train's Summer Fun Run, which continues through Labor Day, is designed to appeal to couples and families who would normally drive the 900 miles south to begin their Florida vacation from Midwestern destinations.

Auto-train's one-way summer fare is $159 for the car, $44 for each adult and $22 for each child under 12 from Louisville, Kentucky to Sanford, Florida. Travelers also receive a 50 per cent discount on the return leg of their trip when they make that return within 10 days of their departure.

All these rates should be especially attractive to larger families of four or more members who would otherwise require two nights' motel accommodations to cover the 900-mile trip. Fares include all meals so en route costs of food can be counted as a savings. The Auto-train trip actually adds a day of active vacation time each way by reducing two days on the road to an overnight journey.

On board guests enjoy complimentary picnic-style meals, contests, prizes and singalongs. Checkers, coloring books and "Etch-a-Sketch" will keep the kids busy and happy. And a new Soda Pop Stop is set up especially to cater to the young, and the young-at-heart, during the trip, selling sodas and snacks, comic books and miniature ice cream cones. Meanwhile, adults can play "SCRABBLE" or backgammon. In the evening after dinner, it's show time in the dining car, featuring full-length movies. And, of course, dome lounges are open for a cocktail and a wide view of the passing countryside.

Summer travelers interested in taking advantage of the reduced rates and extra fun of the Summer Fun Run should call Auto-train's toll-free number: 800-424-1111.

Myra Waldo's Orient travel guide now on sale

Thoroughly revised and updated, "Myra Waldo's Travel Guide To The Orient And The Pacific 1977-1978" continues to offer all the reliable, well-researched essentials for which the author is known: recommended hotels and restaurants, regional food specialties, excellent little out-of-the-way eating places, regional bargains and pseudo-bargains, climate and temperatures, what to wear, tipping, passport and visa regulations, night life, guided tours and much more.

The 688-page guidebook covers Japan, Macao, Hong Kong, Sri Lanka, Hawaii, India, Tahiti, New Zealand, the Philippines and twelve other destinations. A special section divides tours into four categories, with suggested itineraries for (1) a trip of about three weeks, (2) a month's trip to see Asia's highspots, (3) the Grand Tour — a minimum of fifty-two days, and (4) a dreamy Seeing-the-Pacific on a round-the-world voyage. The book is on sale in many local book stores.

Delta Airlines has Caribbean dream vacations

Delta Air Lines' program of Caribbean Dream Vacations for 1977 features Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Jamaica, Trinidad-Tobago, Saint Martin, and Grand Cayman Island. Delta's new Caribbean Dream Vacation brochure available from travel agents, highlights twelve packages. Roundtrip air transportation is not included in the package price.

"Puerto Rico Sea & Sunshine" takes the vacationer to San Juan and island resorts on a seven-day, six-night package. The package price ranges from $62 to $357 per person, double occupancy, and includes hotel accommodations in San Juan and nearby resorts, welcome rum drink at airport and Goabey souvenir, welcome drink at Wine Cellar or Top of the Cellar, and admission to evening and Sunday afternoon races at El Comandante.

"Puerto Rico Palmas del Mar Golf & Tennis" provides accommodations in Palmas del Mar villas, complete with kitchen. The same package is also available in both Montego Bay and Negril.

Tourism in Kansas is getting a date for your ugly sister

Kansas, the breadbasket of the country, is having problems attracting tourists.

An $80,000 study indicates many people, including residents, don't think much of the state except how they can travel through it as quickly as possible.

"Drab was a word used by several respondents," the firm of Welling, Minton & Vanderslice Inc. of Tulsa, Okla., said in a summary of its Kansas Tourism Report.

"Kansas is seen as a pass-through state by most," the report said. "Prior visits by many have consisted of getting from one border to the other as quickly as possible, en route to Colorado, Missouri or further points."

Even Kansans don't think much of the state, the consutants said.

Larry Montgomery, director of research and publications for the Kansas Department of Economic Development, outlined the findings of the $80,000 study conducted under the sponsorship of the Ozark Regional Commission.

"It's sort of like, how do you get a date for an ugly sister?" Montgomery said.

He said at one time, Alaska Airlines used the advertising slogan, "After you've seen Alaska, the rest looks like Kansas."

The consultants said many persons have an outright negative image of Kansas, while others have no image at all and no desire to visit the state.

Montgomery said 40 million persons travel through Kansas each year and half of them are potential tourists. He said the state's image should be improved immediately to capitalize on those already passing through the state, rather than attempting to snare visitors from outlying states.

He said the report estimated that if tourists could be enticed to stay in Kansas for three days and spend $45 a day, the state's revenue would increase more than $80 million a year, 3,500 new jobs would be created and tax revenue would jump $25 million. (UPI)

Perform at your peak — it's easy

by Wandalyn Rice

Laurence E. Morehouse is a cheerful revolutionary. He enjoys what he is doing and he wants everyone else to enjoy what they're doing.

That, deep down, is the reason he and collaborator Leonard Gross have written "Maximum Performance" (Simon and Schuster, $8.95), a book that is NOT, he says, a sequel to "Total Fitness in 30 Minutes a Week."

"Total Fitness" was written for laymen applying the fitness and conditioning techniques that Morehouse, a physiologist and professor of kinesiology at the University of California at Los Angeles, had developed over the years.

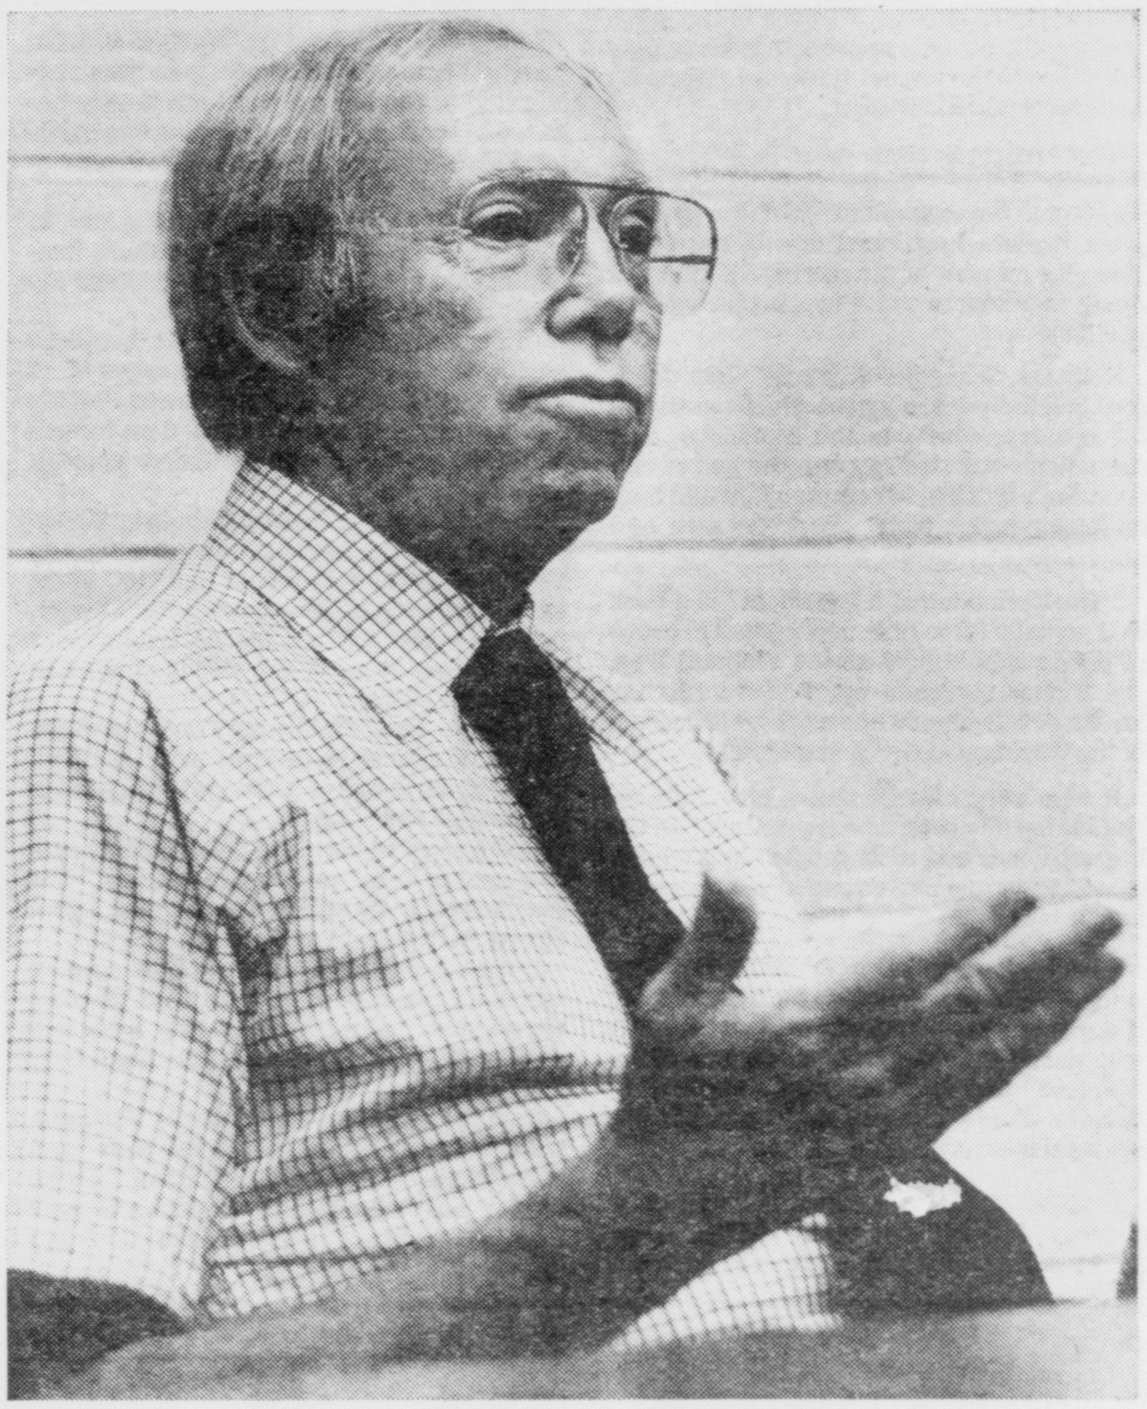
That first book, he said, was inspired by his reading of other popular fitness books. "I had been doing technical writing for years and I had a sense that the basic principles were pretty well understood, but I wrote for the public because everything that was being written for the public was almost all wrong."

"Total Fitness" departed from the traditional (for popular fitness books at least) idea that to be fit a person had to meet specific, external goals based on a number of push-ups or miles jogged. Instead, in the total fitness program, the individual used his or her own pulse rate to gauge their effort and chooses their own level of fitness, from minimum to maximum.

Morehouse, a tall, slim elfin man who looks younger than 64, delights in the reaction the first book, which has been printed in thirteen languages, received. "I got a natural reaction from the jocks who basically said there is no way anyone could get as fit as they were in 30 minutes a week — which is true, but that wasn't what I was talking about. They never read my book, but then I don't worry about critics who never read the book," he says.

Morehouse is quick to explain that "Maximum Performance" is not even on the same subject as "Total Fitness." "Fitness is not performance. You can be super strong and have super endurance and not be a good performer," he says. "You can be an excellent performer and still be shortchanged on your fitness so you poop out fast."

In addition, he says, "health is different from either fitness or performance. I had a friend who had lung cancer who was scheduled to go into the hospital. He and I went swimming and he wanted to race. Well, he got ahead of me and I never did catch him. You'd have to say he wasn't healthy — two weeks later he was dead — but he was fit and he could perform."



In "Maximum Performance," Morehouse spends some time dealing with specific training methods to improve performance in specific sports and also talks about how to judge the quality of sports coaching you are receiving. But much of the book is only peripherally related to sport and with good reason.

"I would defy anyone to pick up this book and read a page and not have it change the way you do something," he says. "The book will interfere with the way you are doing almost everything."

Everyday performance, particularly performance in an office setting, occupies much of Morehouse's book. And "time and motion" experts and contoured chairs come in for particular scorn.

"Having everything convenient in an office, so you don't have to move to get something, is inhuman. It destroys you," he says. "The blood pools in the lower parts of your body away from the brain and you get stupid. The time and motion experts who reduced everything to a minimum of motion didn't have man in mind."

To counteract such "stupidity" induced by a sedentary office setting, Morehouse advocates counter-measures such as the mini-break ("at least every half hour you should stand up and take a break for a few seconds"), the non-business lunch and the standup conference ("try standing near the front edge of your desk. In all likelihood the discussion will be over in five minutes, with as much accomplished as would have been had you sunk into chairs for a twenty minute conference").

The bad thing about contoured chairs — like convenient offices — is that they make a person sit still. "You are only comfortable in one position." In the book, he presents his design for a perfect chair — arms just short enough not to get in the way, support for the lower back and room to wiggle around.

There are other hints — and exercises — in "Maximum Performance" which relate to what Morehouse describes as his lifelong passion: how to do things better. "I've always thought it was obscene to take more time than needed to do something," he says.

And that leads him to an attack on one of the most sacred of all principles in most "fitness" literature and indeed in society in general — the principle that worthwhile accomplishments are the result of struggle.

"The myth that has turned people off is the misconception that with physical training it has to get harder and harder. That's not true. All you have to do is make a commitment in terms of time and the amount of exertion you want to give and you can go a tremendous way because the farther you get with training, the more you do with the same amount of effort."

In addition, Morehouse says, struggle and the resulting tension positively interferes with good performance. "The key to performance is not power. It's relaxation — letting yourself do it. Struggle does not enhance performance."

The problem, he says, is that society respects those who work too hard, not those who accomplish much with little effort. "It's almost as if people are saying 'if daddy doesn't have a heart attack, what's wrong

WINNING WITH MONEY: A GUIDE FOR YOUR FUTURE by Beryl W. Sprinkel and Robert J. Genetski (Dow Jones-Irwin, $10.95).

Reviewed by Lea Tonkin

Everything you always wanted to know about money, and more. That's what readers will find in "Winning With Money: A Guide for Your Future."

There's just no simple way to explain the shenanignas of the U.S. monetary system. But authors Sprinkel and Genetski give it their best shot.

And as a reward for wading through their money mechanics introduction, the economists dish up some advice for people who want to get ahead of the game in their investment strategies.

"Whatever lies ahead, the serious investor must closely monitor current and future economic trends and the government policies that will influence those trends," Sprinkel and Genetski advise. "The best way is to follow closely what political leaders say and do and to anticipate the influence that their moves will have on basic economic forces."

Many of the politicans' "solutions" for the nation's economic ills include a fast-paced boost in the U.S. money supply. This in turn will have an adverse impact on many citizens, the authors warn.

Sprinkel and Genetski are well qualified to sift through money and personal investment trends. Sprinkel is an executive vice president and economist at Chicago's Harris Bank. Genetski also is an economist, and he heads the bank's economic research section.

Inflation creates winners and losers, according to the "Winning With Money" authors. This increase in the general price level brings a redistribution of income and the value of various assets. The lineup of winners include workers with job mobility, government tax collectors, debtors and owners of real property.

Develop a consistent savings plan as early in life as possible, Sprinkel and Genetski advise potential investors. Before you can play the money game, you must have the necessary assets.

Next, look for types of income and assets which should perform well in an inflationary economy, the authors say. Don't put all your eggs in one or two baskets, but note that your house is probably the single best investment you're likely to make. A combination of common stocks and short term fixed income securities is recomended.

Beware of get-rich-quick schemes, Genetski and Sprinkel warn. Although they favor the steady, relatively risk-free investments, the prospect of fast-track gains may be appealing to those who are willing to take greater risks.

An ideal time for holding stocks is during a period of monetary expansion, slowing inflation, decreasing interest rates and rising corporate profits, Sprinkel and Genetski counsel. And conversely, stockholdings should be trimmed when monetary growth drops, interest rates rise and profits decline.

Sprinkel and Genetski offer no promises of sure-fire riches to investors. Their suggestions about monitoring business and government trends can help investors come out winners in the money game.

THE UNMAKING OF A PRESIDENT by Herbert Y. Schandler (Princeton University Press, $16.50)

Reviewed by Steve Brown

The publishers call Herbert Y. Schandler's "The Unmaking of a President" a "second generation" study of the Vietnam War, but even the passage of time has not dulled the vivid memories of this great American debacle.

Benefitting from the passage of time, the work of other authors and his own first hand experience in the Johnson administration, Schandler is able to avoid the emotionalism that gripped many authors who rushed to tell some segment of the Vietnam saga before or just after the end.

The author skillfully blends his own Department of Defense experience with the writings of others and personal interviews with many who were the prime shapers of U.S. strategy during the course of the war to present an even handed analysis of the deliberations within the White House, the Pentagon and the field headquarters in Vietnam.

But even the balanced treatment seems to draw the reader to the side of those government officials who questioned the viability of the Southeast Asian war and the rationale behind the never-ending troop build-ups.

The author also does a good job of showing the role of the political decisions that led up to the decision by the late President Lyndon B. Johnson not to seek reelection in 1968 and how the reasoning affected the conduct of the war.

If there is a shortcoming it might be the professorial approach taken by Schandler, who now works as a national defense specialist in the congressional research section of the Library of Congress. The viewpoint of the government decision-makers is important, but it lacks any real attention to the growing citizen disenchantment with the war.

Schandler mentions the student protests and the sharp slide by Johnson in the popularity polls, but this approach does not give full value to the impact these developments had on the administration.

There might be some value in this failing, however, because it does give a clear indication of the vacuum in which the government leaders functioned during the years when the number of Americans fighting and dying in Vietnam grew by staggering proportions.

However, Schandler does relate how Johnson, belatedly learning the divisions within the country, comes to the conclusion that the nation's war strategy must be junked and America's battlefield commanders told they no longer had a blank check for men and material.

"The Unmaking of a President" is a book that actually turns little new ground in terms of public enlightment on the Vietnam War, but it does correlate many of the already known developments into a readable account of the Washington decision-making.

It also very clearly shows how Johnson and his top advisers, who supposedly had the keenest minds and most detailed intelligence, consistently guessed wrong at nearly every turn.

The book does little to salve the consciences of those who made the blunders, but it does stand as additional evidence for any who dare to involve this nation in another "limited" no-win conflagration that serves only to divide families and bankrupt the national treasury.

Herbert Y. Schandler has not written a mystery; he has successfully written about a very sad moment in this nation's history.

A RUMOR OF WAR by Philip Caputo (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $10)

Reviewed by Jeff Trimble

Philip Caputo joined the Marines in 1960, "partly because I got swept up in the patriotic tide of the Kennedy era but mostly because I was sick of the safe, suburban existence I had known most of my life" in nearby Westchester.

He survived the rigors of training and, in 1964, was commissioned as a second lieutenant and sent to Okinawa to assume his first command.

After resigning himself to the boredom and routine on "the Rock" he learned of an exciting possibility. It was rumored that his company might be sent to guard an American airbase in a remote Asian country called Vietnam.

In the twelve years since Caputo landed in Danang with the first Americans to fight in Vietnam, a war was fought and lost, along with thousands of American lives. Caputo, now a reporter for the Chicago Tribune, has recorded his story of the bloody conflict in "A Rumor of War."

Caputo's book stands out from the plethora of Vietnam postscripts with a vivid, gripping narrative of a Marine's daily life in the jungles and camps.

It is a story of boredom, shattered by sudden ambush by an unseen enemy. The Marines struggle as much against the brutal climate as against the Vietcong.

But above all, it is a story of young men and the camaraderie of war. The Marines ate together, slept in the same monsoon-soaked foxholes, drank together and finally died together.

Caputo details his 16 months in Vietnam, starting with "The Splendid Little War" and ending with "In Death's Grey Land." These section headings capture Caputo's change from a confident soldier to a doubting dissenter.

After his first field command, Caputo was made "Officer in Charge of the Dead" as he called it. His job was to take calls from companies and maintain files on American casualties.

Caputo's descriptions of this grisly task are the most vivid and moving chapters in the book.

After a few months on that job, he requested assignment back to front line action. The Vietcong had grown stronger, but Caputo had changed also.

He had begun to hate the enemy, and became almost casual about killing. His hate culminated in his neglect of an encounter that resulted in the deaths of two innocent South Vietnamese.

Caputo was court martialed for the incident, but was found innocent and sent back to the United States.

The book ends with an epilogue about the fall of Saigon in 1975. Caputo had returned to Vietnam as a correspondent for the Tribune, and was among the last Americans to leave the doomed city.

"A Rumor of War" has a message for Americans of all ages. To those too young to have been involved in the conflict, the waste of life and property is vividly recounted.

To Americans involved in the war, Caputo serves as an eloquent spokesman for the era, protesting against its injustices.

For older Americans, the war that many of them ignored is finally brought to their attention. Caputo shows the difference between the Vietnam jungle fighting and earlier wars fought by the older generation.

Some readers might feel the descriptions of violence are overdone and repetitive, but Caputo uses them well to pound home his theme of what the fighting was like.

Vietnam was a disaster most Americans would like to forget. But the voices of men like Philip Caputo should be heeded and remembered before the next Vietnam starts.

with him, he's not working hard enough.' That is our false way of viewing performance."

The ideal result of "Maximum Performance," he says, would be to bring about a revolutionary change in that attitude. "We should admire the person who is having fun with his work, who can make his work easy — that should be our new champion."

Short of that revolution, he believes "Maximum Performance," with its hints about dynamic relaxation and use of energy and effort, can at least give some benefit to the average person.

"No matter what you do — if you are a Monday night bowler and have times when you bowl with perfect form — there are times for a moment when you are performing as well as a champion," he says. "Every golfer once in a while will swing the club just as well as Jack Nicklaus and you can have that championship experience more and more if you apply the principle to help things work better."

And that, Morehouse's smile clearly says, is what makes everything worthwhile.

Olga knows

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This week, Ari, desire will be strong to roll over in the clover. So roll. That's what summer is all about, my pet. However, before week is completely shot you should settle down (temporarily at least!) and take care of business. Last day finds you flattened and fatigued. Ah, but with a smile on your face.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your private garden needs closer watch, Taurus, for troublemaker can slip in unnoticed. Don't you have enough problems? Do you really need a sassy serpent slithering about in your personal Eden? Constant vigilance is price you must pay for territorial rights.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Concerning impending personal decision, Gem, you should listen to advice but follow intuition. Strong and shifting currents propel you toward hidden areas of your heart. As weeks go, sweet Gem, this one should go rather swimmingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't press loved one for commitment. Play waiting game. This may not be the easiest game in town, Moonbaby, but it is the wisest. Trust Olga and the stars. Before week is over love skateboards onto your horizon. How nice.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Happy Birthday, Leo! Because you have such unusual charm and magnetism, you make friends and lovers easily. Keeping them, on the other hand, is another matter entirely. You often rely on theatrics to get your point across when a simple declarative statement is all that's needed. August and December should be memorable months this year. The tide turns. And returns.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): Guard against carelessness and boredom for they are just two of "the little foxes that spoil the vine." Gossip is often the spoiled child born of ennui. This week, my dear Virgo, you should keep busy, keep on and KEEP QUIET!

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): If you travel, Lib, keep close eye on your belongings. Olga doesn't want anyone pinching Libra's poke. Or anything else, for that matter! Study Virgo for secret message.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): One who pressures for perfection should, for the sake of your sanity, be kept at safe distance. Your own energy crisis needs attention, NOW. Personal drama approaches denouement.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Questions concerning future plans sure to be asked. If you haven't the energy (or the desire) to weigh your words carefully, Saj, then plead the Fifth. Your natural inclination to blab could get you into hot water. Week splashes to a frantic fini.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): Opportunity arises for you to really communicate with member of another generation. Do it. You can leap over traditional "gap" with grace and 'elan. Proper timing, however, is critical. By last day, Cap, your little world warms considerably.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): After confusing beginning, week calms considerably and by third day you are tooling along full throttle. Burdensome segment of your life due to be phased out. Don't be afraid to assert yourself. A confrontation will clear the air. Honestly. You'll see.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): You have some growing up to do, Pisces. This may mean getting rid of unnecessary burden. And don't worry about what "they" will think. The truth is that "they" don't give a fig. On last day, wiggle your little tail in new, fresh waters. You'll be renewed, reassured and rewarded.

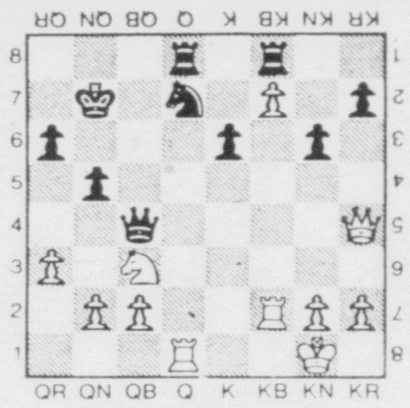
BEGINNER'S CORNER



WHITE WINS A PIECE

It is common knowledge that come chessplayers are able to play "blindfold chess," that is, chess without sight of the board. Informed verbally of their opponent's moves, they visualize those moves as well as their own.

The blind also play chess, but they in fact "see" the board by means of touch. Their equipment is a board with slightly raised black squares and pegged pieces which are smooth-topped or pointed depending on whether they are white or black.

Recently, the National Blind Championship was held in Westfield, N.J. According to a U.S. Chess Federation release, "sixteen blind players from ten states came alone, with friends, and with guide dogs to compete . . ."

The winner was Dr. James P. Slagle, 43, of Marlow Heights, Md. Slagle, who has a mathematics PhD from M.I.T., is chief of the Computer Science Laboratory in the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education, and Welfare. He is also married and the father of five children.

Incidentally, as demonstrated in Westfield, a curious custom of blind players is to give a standing ovation to the player who finishes last.

Stamp notes

General Nicholas Herkimer and the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Oriskany will be commemorated on a 13-cent U.S. stamp to be released Aug. 6.

Designed by Bradbury Thompson of Riverside, Conn. and based on a painting by Frederick Yohn, the adhesive depicts the fatally wounded Herkimer propped against a tree directing his troops. Historians consider the American victory at Oriskany a significant contribution to the failure of the British northern campaign and one of the hardest fought hand-to-hand battles of the Revolutionary War.

The semi-jumbo size Herkimer stamp will be the fourth Bicentennial Series issue of 1977. It is being printed on the seven-color gravure press in panes of 40 stamps with five plate numbers.

Collectors affixing their own Herkimer stamps may submit their self-addressed, stamped covers for first day cancellations to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Herkimer, N.Y. 13350."

Collectors wishing the Postal Service to affix the Herkimer stamps to their covers should send self-addressed envelopes to "Herkimer Stamp, Postmaster, Herkimer, N.Y. 13350." Pencil in lightly in the upper right hand corner of the envelope how many stamps you wish affixed and enclose payment for them.

All orders for cancellations must be postmarked no later than Aug. 22.

The following souvenir cards will be withdrawn from sale by the Philatelic Sales Division after July 31:

- Science and Technology Exposition Card (Mint price, $1.25; Canceled, $1.45)
- Colorado Centennial Card (Mint, $1.25; Canceled, $1.38)

Orders should be sent to "July Withdrawals, Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265" and will be filled as long as supplies last until July 31. There is a 50-cent handling charge on each mail order.

Oil wells make Denver a rich dude

by Vernon Scott

Denver Pyle is playing a crusty old coot in his third television series as Mad Jack in "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams."

White haired and bearded, Pyle is 57 years old but established himself on television playing men a good deal older in "Tammy" and "The Doris Day Show."

Pyle is a man of many parts and interests. He is, among other things, enormously rich thanks to his Tri-Island Land and Cattle Co.

His firm owns nine oil wells in Colorado and West Texas and a gas well in Southern Utah. All the wells are producing. His company also includes a new mining venture in Arizona.

Pyle has been divorced five years. His sons, David, 21, and Tony, 20, are in college.

Until two years ago the actor-businessman rattled around in a spacious San Fernando Valley house. Now he lives in a two-bedroom apartment which doubles as an office and workroom.

The apartment reflects the man. It is filled with precious antiques, old clocks and rare paintings.

When Pyle sold his home he intended to live on his 50-foot power boat which he refinished and refurbished himself. But he couldn't bring himself to sell or give away his treasured belongings.

The cost of storing so many objects was prohibitive. So Pyle rented the apartment originally as an inexpensive place to store his things. The apartment became so comfortable he sold the boat and became a landlubber.

Among the antiques is a 300-year-old Thai chair which he says took three generations to carve. His paintings include a Matisse, some Lionel Barrymore etchings and the works of a Japanese artist. His favorite is a portrait of himself at 22 done by his painter brother.

He owns a dozen old Seth Thomas clocks which he keeps in tiptop repair. Currently he is fixing four others that have been sent to him by people from various parts of the country.

Every room of his apartment is filled with books. He has one of the most complete private libraries of reference and research books dealing with the oil industry.

Three shelves in his fully equipped kitchen are laden with cookbooks. Pyle is a truly expert amateur chef. He is noted for his beef stew, with a special tang provided by the addition of chorizo, a Mexican sausage.

On special occasions he makes a steak Wellington — the best steak available wrapped in dough and baked with shallots and pate.

Pyle is a lady's man of note. He dates a variety of attractive women. "I usually take them out to dinner," he says, "or bring them home and cook for them — depending on the stage of our relationships."

When Pyle isn't otherwise occupied, he's out tinkering around with his collection of vintage automobiles.

He owns a 1955 Bentley classic, a Lotus Cortina race car, a 1949 "woody" Ford station wagon and currently is converting a 1973 Volkswagen into a 1938 Ford by adding and subtracting chassis and body parts. He does all the work himself.

The NBC-TV series is filmed entirely on location in and around Park City, Utah, and Payson, Ariz., from September until January. When the show is in production he works from dawn until nightfall.

During hiatus, Pyle travels the southwest on his business enterprises and works at his various hobbies. If acting jobs come up, so much the better.

Pyle is in excellent physical condition. But he isn't tied down to any exercise schedule.

Instead, he spends 20 days at a time working as a crew member of a commercial fishing boat off the coast of Mexico, another dawn till dusk job.

"I do that to keep my body in shape and my brains cleared up," he says. "Besides that, I get seven per cent of the catch. It's a 70-foot gill-netter with a crew of four.

"It's great to be with people who don't care about television or want to talk about show business."

When Pyle is in Los Angeles his sons come to visit almost every weekend. They head for the ocean where the young men surf while their father fishes from the beach, pulling in perch and corbina.

Denver Pyle leads a full and rich life and, what's more, he appears to enjoy every minute of it.

Jerry Lewis

Could you please tell me a little about Jerry Lewis, and some movies he has been in?

B.K.

Lewis has been involved in more than 40 movies over the past 25 years. In 1949 he acted in "My Friend Irma," the first of a long series of films made with co-star Dean Martin. Lewis then tried his hand at writing and producing, with the 1957 film "The Delicate Delinquent" in which he also starred. "The Bellboy" (1960) represents his debut as a film director. There are so many films (such as "The Patsy," "The Nutty Professor" or "The Family Jewels," to name a few) in which he portrays the bumbling goof.

If you would like more information about Jerry Lewis, why not try writing to Jerry Lewis Films, Inc., 1400 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, Calif. 90067?

Joan Fontaine

My friend and I are having a disagreement we'd like to settle. She believes Joan Crawford is the sister of Olivia de Havilland, but I say it's Joan Caulfield. Who's the expert movie buff?

N.B.

Neither of you. Olivia's sister is Joan Fontaine, whose original name was Joan de Beauvoir de Havilland. And, to answer a similarly frequent question: no, Vivien Leigh is not the sister of Olivia de Havilland.

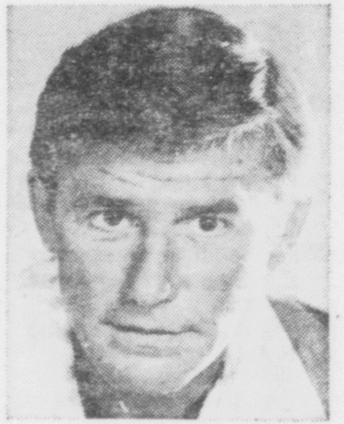
I have two questions pertaining to Roddy McDowall. One: did he ever appear in "Cool Million"? Two: when is his birthday?

M.T.



Roddy McDowall

And I have two answers. One: yes. Two: despite his deceptively boyish face, McDowall will be celebrating his 49th birthday come September 17.
